Theatres of Portland Gary Lacher, Steve Stone, 2009 Portland's theatre history is marked by early enthusiasm and exceptionally vigorous growth. With the Pacific Northwest's often rainy weather, people sought refuge in movie entertainment, and the city eventually grew to have more theatre seats per capita than similar-sized cities in the United States. Beginning with short cinema segments at vaudeville houses downtown, Portland movie theatres came into their own swiftly and ambitiously. By 1915 there were over 70 individual theatres showing films both downtown and in neighborhoods throughout the city. By the 1920s larger theatres were being built, including substantial neighborhood palaces such as the Bagdad Hollywood and Oriental. Meanwhile downtown provided the Broadway Portland and Orpheum to name a few. This volume contains an overview of Portland's theatre history through rare and newly discovered historical photographs of those memorable places of entertainment.

Wicked Portland Finn J. D. John, 2021-01-04 Tucked away in the northwestern frontier, Portland offered all the best vices: opium, dreams, gambling, cheap prostitutes, and drunken brawling. In its early days, Portland was a combination rough and ready logging camp and gritty, hard-punching deep-water port town, and as a young city established in the late 1840s, it developed an international reputation for lawlessness and violence. In the early 1900s, the British and French governments filed formal complaints about Portland to the US State Department, and Congressional testimony from the time cites Portland as the worst place in the world for crimping. Today, tours of the alleged Shanghai Tunnels offer Portland visitors a taste of that seedy past.
