Separated by Steel R. K. Heidemann, 2004-03 No one ever imagines writing a book about the pain of watching someone you love walk into prison to serve a sentence of any kind I was compelled to write such a book after I had to leave my husband at the doors of a federal prison that would be his home for thirty four months I knew we needed God's insights into how to deal with the myriad of emotions that arose from his incarceration In this deeply personal project I have shared what God's ideal for commitment is really meant to be As a Christian I feel it is important to stress that there is strength beyond our limited human capacity if we will trust God to get us through it We can minister to our own friends and families in situations like this Prayer can make a tremendous difference in the life of a prisoner and his family Inmates can find solace in God's love and in the genuine love of His people We should all be a part of the rehabilitation of every offender I am convinced that prisoners and their families and friends can find comfort for their wounded hearts if they will adhere to God's ideal for their lives even in the midst of a loved one's absence We do not have to allow statistics to subvert our love and commitment for someone who happens to be in jail Christians have a duty to serve all mankind even prisoners and their families
