Excerpt from A Complete Manual of the Brief System of Shorthand: Arranged for Self-Instruction and for Schools None but those who have had experience in this line can appreciate the amount of work and care required to prepare a Shorthand text book. The author himself did not realize what a task it was when he commenced it. A considerable portion of the time during the past eight months he has devoted to the preparation of this volume. Even after the matter had been definitely arranged, the work of preparing the copy for the engravers and printers, and of the revising necessary in order to insure accuracy, was so great that in some cases several days were spent upon a single page. All of the Shorthand plates have been read and re-read carefully a number of times, but in spite of the great pains taken to avoid errors, it will not be surprising if some have still been overlooked. It was expected that this book would be ready for dcliv ery by March Ist, and to the many whose advance orders we have had since that time, and before, we desire to offer an apology. We have regretted the delay more than any one else could, but under all the circumstances it has been unavoidable. True Christian politeness will always be the result of an unselfish regard for the feelings of others, and though you may err in the ceremonious points of etiquette, you will never be im polite. Politeness, founded upon such a rule, becomes the expression, in graceful manner, of social virtues. The spirit of politeness consists in a certain attention to forms and ceremonies, which are meant both to please others and ourselves, and to make others pleased with us ;a still clearer definition may be given by saying that politeness is goodness of heart put into daily practice; the.re can be no true, politeness without kindness, purity, singleness of heart, and sensibility. Many believe that politeness is but a mask worn in the world to conceal bad passions and impulses, and to make a show of possessing virtues not really existing in the heart; thus, that politeness is merely hypocrisy and dissimulation.
