Parvathy, Dr. M. Abareethan, Dr. P. Ramu, Dr. R. Usha Kalyani, 2023-06-27 Citizens businesses municipalities and pollution control agencies all share some of the blame for the lack of effective waste management in these nations The term waste management refers to the coordinated effort put out to sort collect transport reprocess recycle and dispose of garbage

Energy use methane emissions storing carbon ecological health and human health are all affected differently by various wastes and waste management activities Central as well as state governments continue to play an important role by creating policies programmes as well as regulations as well as providing financial and technical support for infrastructure development which includes management of municipal solid waste MSW within urban areas as many local governments have yet to develop their own capacity to independently regulate their solid waste Despite the fact that MSWM is a required service provided by municipal authorities throughout the nation it is still being handled in an unorganised fashion which has major consequences for the environment and the health of women and children in particular This highlights the critical need of urban local authorities developing an MSWM strategy that is both comprehensive and strategic As the pace at which goods are produced and consumed continues to rise so does the volume of waste generated iv and discarded by civilizations in all walks of life To rephrase solid wastes are the byproducts of human and animal activity that are often solid and are discarded because they are deemed unnecessary or undesirable This will unavoidably put a significant damper on efficient and sustainable growth by placing a massive pressure on natural resources

Higher Order Thinking in Science Classrooms: Students' Learning and Teachers' Professional Development Anat Zohar, 2004-01-31 How can educators bridge the gap between big ideas about teaching students to think and educational practice This book addresses this question by a unique combination of theory field experience and elaborate educational research Its basic idea is to look at science instruction with regard to two sets of explicit goals one set refers to teaching science concepts and the second set refers to teaching higher order thinking This book tells about how thinking can be taught not only in the rare and unique conditions that are so typical of affluent experimental educational projects but also in the less privileged but much more common conditions of educational practice that most schools have to endure It provides empirical evidence showing that students from all academic levels actually improve their thinking and their scientific knowledge following the thinking curricula and discusses specific means for teaching higher order thinking to students with low academic achievements The second part of the book addresses issues that pertain to teachers professional development and to their knowledge and beliefs regarding the teaching of higher order thinking This book is intended for a very large audience researchers including graduate students curricular designers practicing and pre service teachers college students teacher educators and those interested in educational reform Although the book is primarily about the development of thinking in science classrooms most of its chapters may be of interest to educators from all disciplines

Teaching Chemistry in Higher Education Michael Seery, Claire Mc Donnell, 2019-07-01 Teaching Chemistry in Higher Education celebrates the contributions of Professor Tina Overton to the scholarship and practice of teaching and learning in chemistry education. Leading educators in United Kingdom, Ireland and Australia, three countries where Tina has had enormous impact and influence, have contributed chapters on innovative approaches that are well established in their own practice. Each chapter introduces the key education literature underpinning the approach being described. Rationales are discussed in the context of attributes and learning outcomes desirable in modern chemistry curricula. True to Tina's personal philosophy, chapters offer pragmatic and useful guidance on the implementation of innovative teaching approaches, drawing from the authors' experience of their own practice and evaluations of their implementation. Each chapter also offers key guidance points for implementation in readers' own settings so as to maximise their adaptability. Chapters are supplemented with further reading and supplementary materials on the book's website: overtonfestschrift.wordpress.com. Chapter topics include innovative approaches in facilitating group work, problem solving context and problem based learning, embedding transferable skills and laboratory education, all themes relating to the scholarly interests of Professor Tina Overton. About the Editors: Michael Seery is Professor of Chemistry Education at the University of Edinburgh and is Editor of Chemistry Education Research and Practice. Claire Mc Donnell is Assistant Head of School of Chemical and Pharmaceutical Sciences at Technological University Dublin. Cover Art: Christopher Armstrong, University of Hull.
