Alternatives to Privatization David A. McDonald, Greg Ruiters, 2012-04-23 There is a vast literature for and against privatizing public services Those who are against privatization are often confronted with the objection that they present no alternative This book takes up that challenge by establishing theoretical models for what does and does not constitute an alternative to privatization and what might make them successful backed up by a comprehensive set of empirical data on public services initiatives in over 40 countries This is the first such global survey of its kind providing a rigorous and robust platform for evaluating different alternatives and allowing for comparisons across regions and sectors The book helps to conceptualize and evaluate what has become an important and widespread movement for better public services in the global South The contributors explore historical existing and proposed non commercialized alternatives for primary health water sanitation and electricity The objectives of the research have been to develop conceptual and methodological frameworks for identifying and analyzing alternatives to privatization and testing these models against actually existing alternatives on the ground in Asia Africa and Latin America Information of this type is urgently required for practitioners and analysts both of whom are seeking reliable knowledge on what kind of public models work how transferable they are from one place to another and what their main strengths and weaknesses are

Natural Microporous Materials in Environmental Technology P. Misaelides, F. Macásek, T.J. Pinnavaia, C. Colella, 2012-12-06 Proceedings of the NATO Advanced Research Workshop on the Application of Natural Microporous Materials for Environmental Technology Smolenice Castle Slovakia 26-30 October 1998 Biomonitoring of Trace Aquatic Contaminants David J.H. Phillips, Philip S. Rainbow, 1994

Twenty years ago researchers wishing to identify contaminated areas in aquatic environments generally took water samples and analysed them badly as we have since discovered for a few pollutants which were of topical note at the time and which could be quantified by the methods then available Today the use of aquatic organisms as biomonitors in preference to water analysis has become commonplace and many national and international programmes exist around the world involving such studies We believe that this trend will continue and have complete faith in the methodology when it is employed correctly We hope that the following text assists in some part in attaining this goal such that the quality of our most basic global resource water is adequately protected in the future DAVE PHILLIPS PHIL RAINBOW England March 1992 vii Acknowledgements Our thanks for contributions to this book are due to several individuals and groups for varying reasons Firstly a co authored book is always a triumph and we trust that the following text is an acceptable compromise of the views of two individual authors on a complex and developing topic Secondly many of the ideas herein have crystallised over the last two decades as the field has grown and we are individually and collectively grateful to a number of researchers for their insight and assistance The Second Report on the State of the World's Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2010-01-01

Plant genetic resources provide a basis for food security livelihood support and economic development as a major component of biodiversity The Second Report on the State of the World's Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture demonstrates the central role plant genetic diversity continues to play in shaping agriculture growth in the face of climate change and other environmental challenges It is based on information gathered from Country Reports regional syntheses thematic studies and scientific literature documenting the major achievements made in this sector during the past decade and identifying the critical gaps and needs that should urgently be addressed The Report provides the decision makers with a technical basis for updating the Global Plan of Action on Conservation and Sustainable Use of Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture It also aims to attract the attention of the global community to set priorities for the effective management of plant genetic resources for the future Purchase a print copy Model Organisms for Microbial Pathogenesis, Biofilm
