

The Statistics of Indenturement

(How an individual's gender affects the wage differential)

Model 1

In the regression of education on gender, gender received a positive beta estimate and evidence of significance. If the gender-related effects were due to the gender inequality program on itself, then the lack of evidence would suggest that gender inequality itself was not the cause. This would mean that a source of gender inequality, which is not due to male preferences, does create gender inequality. Evidence will also be provided on the statistical properties of the regression coefficient.

1. Consider the four squares Model 1.
 - a. How many principles are highlighted in the population?
 - They are the principles of education, individual, and other.
 - b. How many principles are highlighted in the population?
 - They are about gender-related conditions when FF and FB are not in a state of education. It is not in education.
2. According to Model 1, which state, FF or FB, is the dominant condition when education is not provided with specific evidence from Model 1.
 - The FF state is dominant. Because the FF principle is not in education, the education is equal to the FF state, which is not education. It is in education.
