Dilsaver, 2016 National parks are different from other federal lands in the United States Beginning in 1872 with the establishment of Yellowstone they were largely set aside to preserve for future generations the most spectacular and inspirational features of the country seeking the best representative examples of major ecosystems such as Yosemite geologic forms such as the Grand Canyon archaeological sites such as Mesa Verde and scenes of human events such as Gettysburg But one type of habitat the desert fell short of that goal in American eyes until travel writers and the Automobile Age began to change that perception As the Park Service began to explore the better known Mojave and Colorado deserts of southern California during the 1920s for a possible desert park many agency leaders still carried the same negative image of arid lands shared by many Americans that they are hostile and largely useless But one wealthy woman Minerva Hamilton Hoyt from Pasadena came forward believing in the value of the desert and convinced President Franklin D Roosevelt to establish a national monument that would protect the unique and iconic Joshua trees and other desert flora and fauna Thus was Joshua Tree National Monument officially established in 1936 with the area later expanded in 1994 when it became Joshua Tree National Park Since 1936 the National Park Service and a growing cadre of environmentalists and recreationalists have fought to block ongoing proposals from miners ranchers private landowners and real estate developers who historically have refused to accept the idea that any desert is suitable for anything other than their consumptive activities To their dismay Joshua Tree National Park even with its often conflicting land uses is more popular today than ever serving more than one million visitors per year who find the desert to be a place worthy of respect and preservation Distributed for George Thompson Publishing Environmental Aspects of Zoonotic Diseases Robert Armon,Uta Cheruti,2012-01-31 Environmental Aspects of Zoonotic Diseases provides a definitive description commentary and research needs of environmental aspects related to zoonotic diseases There are many interrelated connections between the environment and zoonotic diseases such as water soil air and agriculture The book presents investigations of these connections with specific reference to environmental processes such as deforestation floods draughts irrigation practices soil transfer and their impact on bacterial viral fungal and parasitological spread Environmental aspects such as climate tropical sub tropical temperate arid and semi arid developed and undeveloped countries animal domestic and wild traffic animal border crossing commercial animal trade transportation as well geography and weather on zoonosis are also discussed and relevant scientific data is condensed and organized in order to give a better picture of interrelationship between the environment and current spread of zoonotic diseases Altogether the book presents a remarkable and a vast amount of potential future research directions based on the link environment vectors pathogens humans The most up to date source of information on this increasingly important cross disciplinary subject Environmental Aspects of Zoonotic Diseases will be invaluable for environmentalists veterinarians medical staff environmental engineers government agencies and consultants working in this field Authors Prof Robert Armon Technion Israel Institute of Technology Haifa Israel Dr Uta Cheruti Technion Israel Institute of Technology Haifa Israel
