Charles Dickens: A Christmas Carol

Context: the 1840s
 P. E. E. L

Read the following extract from Chapter 2 of A Christmas Carol and then answer the question that follows.

In this extract, the Ghost of Christmas Past shows Scrooge the Christmas party he attended at Mr Fezziwig's warehouse when he was a young man.

But if they had been ^{simile} twice as many—ah, four times—old Fezziwig would have been a match for them, and so would Mrs. Fezziwig. As to her, she was worthy to be his partner in every sense of the term. If that's not high praise, tell me higher, and I'll use it. A positive light appeared to issue from Fezziwig's calves.
 5 They shone in every part of the dance like moons. You couldn't have predicted, at any given time, what would have become of them next. And when old Fezziwig and Mrs. Fezziwig had gone all through the dance: advance and retire, both hands to your partner, bow and curtsy, corkscrew, thread-the-needle, and back again to your place; Fezziwig "cut"—cut so deftly, that he appeared to wink
 10 with his legs, and came upon his feet again without a stagger. When the clock struck eleven, this domestic ball broke up. Mr. and Mrs. Fezziwig took their stations, one on either side of the door, and shaking hands with every person individually as he or she went out, wished him or her a Merry Christmas. When everybody had retired but the two prentices, they did the same to them; and thus the cheerful voices died away, and the lads were left to their beds: which were under a counter in the back-shop. ↳ Generosity & charity
 15 During the whole of this time, Scrooge had acted like a man out of his wits. His heart and soul were in the scene, and with his former self. He corroborated everything, remembered everything, enjoyed everything, and underwent the 20 strangest agitation. It was not until now, when the bright faces of his former self and Dick were turned from them, that he remembered the Ghost, and became conscious that it was looking full upon him, while the light upon its head burnt very clear.
 25 "A small matter," said the Ghost, "to make these silly folks so full of gratitude."
 "Small!" echoed Scrooge.
 The Spirit signed to him to listen to the two apprentices, who were pouring out their hearts in praise of Fezziwig: and when he had done so, said,
 "Why! Is it not? He has spent but a few pounds of your mortal money; three or four perhaps. Is that so much that he deserves this praise?" ↳ social injustice, poverty 30 "It isn't that," said Scrooge, heated by the remark, and speaking unconsciously like his former, not his latter, self. "It isn't that, Spirit. He has the power to render us happy or unhappy; to make our service light or burdensome; a pleasure or a toil. Say that his power lies in words and looks; in things so slight and insignificant that it is impossible to add and count 'em up: what then? The 35 happiness he gives, is quite as great as if it cost a fortune."

Understanding and Supporting Product-Service System Designing Abhijna Neramballi,2020-04-06 This licentiate thesis aims to establish the basis for scientifically understanding and supporting the cognitive processes involved in the conceptual design of resource efficient and effective product service systems PSSs The research carried out is transdisciplinary in nature and includes both prescriptive and descriptive studies First the cognitive nature of conceptual PSS designing is investigated Multiple pre experimental protocol studies in a laboratory setting are carried out to do so The cohort of these explorative studies includes experienced industrial practitioners conceptually designing a resource efficient PSS These descriptive studies provide quantitative insights into the cognitive effort expended by designers on various design issues and processes during conceptual PSS designing and its potential differences to conceptual product designing These insights form the basis for future research that can eventually shine light on this complex process with statistically significant empirical results Second the essence of extant prescriptive PSS design principles methods and tools is distilled through a literature analysis and synthesis of the state of the art Subsequently important aspects that need to be considered during conceptual PSS designing are consolidated in the form of a PSS design schema Third a design navigator named lifecycle oriented function deployment LFD is developed LFD is essentially a contextual decision making support tool developed to guide the conceptual designing of environmentally benign PSSs This tool informs the designers regarding the potential environmental impacts of specific design parameters of an existing offering It subsequently guides the designers in the redesign of this existing offering into a PSS with relatively benign environmental impacts Fourth the effects of the two proposed prescriptions are tested empirically True experimental protocol studies are carried out in a laboratory setting to test the effects of the prescriptive PSS design schema on the cognition of PSS designers LFD is applied in an industrial case study using the action design research method to support the conceptual redesign of an existing product centric offering into an environmentally benign PSS Environmental impacts of the PSS concepts generated using LFD are then evaluated in comparison to that of the existing offering using simulated lifecycle assessment A semi structured interview is carried out to evaluate the utility and usability of LFD with the company personnel involved in the conceptual redesign process This licentiate thesis is an effort to effectively design the future research work of the author This future work will aim to support and establish generalizable scientific knowledge regarding the conceptual designing of resource efficient and effective PSSs
