Walker,2003 We Want What's Ours Bernadette Atuahene,2014 Millions of people all over the world have been displaced from their homes and property Dispossessed individuals and communities often lose more than the physical structures they live in and their material belongings they are also denied their dignity These are dignity takings and land dispossessions occurring in South Africa during colonialism and apartheid are quintessential examples There have been numerous examples of dignity takings throughout the world but South Africa stands apart because of its unique remedial efforts The nation has attempted to move beyond the more common step of providing reparations compensation for physical losses to instead facilitating dignity restoration which is a comprehensive remedy that seeks to restore property while also confronting the underlying dehumanization infantilization and political exclusion that enabled the injustice Dignity restoration is the fusion of reparations with restorative justice In We Want What's Ours Bernadette Atuahenes detailed research and interviews with over one hundred and fifty South Africans who participated in the nations land restitution program provide a snapshot of South Africas successes and failures in achieving dignity restoration We Want What's Ours is globally relevant because dignity takings have happened all around the world and throughout history the Nazi confiscation of property from Jews during World War II the Hutu taking of property from Tutsis during the Rwandan genocide the widespread commandeering of native peoples property across the globe and Saddam Husseins seizing of property from the Kurds and others in Iraq are but a few examples When people are deprived of their property and dignity in years to come the lessons learned in South Africa can help governments policy makers scholars and international institutions make the transition from reparations to the more robust project of dignity restoration Edible Insects Arnold van Huis,Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2013 Edible insects have always been a part of human diets but in some societies there remains a degree of disdain and disgust for their consumption Although the majority of consumed insects are gathered in forest habitats mass rearing systems are being developed in many countries Insects offer a significant opportunity to merge traditional knowledge and modern science to improve human food security worldwide This publication describes the contribution of insects to food security and examines future prospects for raising insects at a commercial scale to improve food and feed production diversify diets and support livelihoods in both developing and developed countries It shows the many traditional and potential new uses of insects for direct human consumption and the opportunities for and constraints to farming them for food and feed It examines the body of research on issues such as insect nutrition and food safety the use of insects as animal feed and the processing and preservation of insects and their products It highlights the need to develop a regulatory framework to govern the use of insects for food security And it presents case studies and examples from around the world Edible insects are a promising alternative to the conventional production of meat either for direct human consumption or for indirect use as feedstock To fully realise this potential much work needs to be done by a wide range of stakeholders This publication will boost awareness of the many valuable roles that insects play in sustaining nature and human life and it will stimulate debate on the expansion of the use of insects as food and feed Interim Policy for Early Childhood Development South Africa.
