

A little more on hunger and how big a problem we really have. Hunger kills more people than AIDS, Malaria, and Tuberculosis combined, making it the world's number one health risk. 1 in 3 children in the world are underweight in the world. Over 5 million children are killed each year from hunger. That accounts for almost 50 percent of child deaths every year. What this means is that those that died, their parents have to deal with the fact that they killed their children just because they couldn't support them, because they have less opportunities than you and me. Another fact is that children with poor nutrition suffer an average of 160 days of illnesses a year. That's about 43 percent of their year, they are sick. To me that should not be happening. That is not me and I don't want it to happen to me and I don't think it should happen to others. Also undernutrition, which is what is really responsible of these sick kids, accounts for 61% of diarrhea, 57% of malaria, 52% of pneumonia, and 45% of measles. That is a big percentage of sicknesses that is caused by hunger and it happens so often to children which is not fair to them because they should be able to grow up with the same opportunities as me.

According to the FAO the world produces enough food to provide everyone with about 2,720 kilocalories (kcal) per person per day which is more than enough. So why does hunger exist then? I think is mostly based on poverty and that they can't buy enough food to provide for themselves and that there are a lot of people out there that have for food than they should have like maybe some big restaurant chains. So knowing this, what can we do to really help these unfortunate people in the world? Some ways we can help would be participate in a food drive. Most cities at least in America have an organization that has a frequent food drive or organization that helps your local community. If you don't have a local hunger organization you can always get a few friends and start a food drive in your community.

Food Insecurity and Hunger in the United States National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Panel to Review the U.S Department of Agriculture's Measurement of Food Insecurity and Hunger, 2006-05-02 The United States is viewed by the world as a country with plenty of food yet not all households in America are food secure meaning access at all times to enough food for an active healthy life A proportion of the population experiences food insecurity at some time in a given year because of food deprivation and lack of access to food due to economic resource constraints Still food insecurity in the United States is not of the same intensity as in some developing countries Since 1995 the U S Department of Agriculture USDA has annually published statistics on the extent of food insecurity and food insecurity with hunger in U S households These estimates are based on a survey measure developed by the U S Food Security Measurement Project an ongoing collaboration among federal agencies academic researchers and private organizations USDA requested the Committee on National Statistics of the National Academies to convene a panel of experts to undertake a two year study in two phases to review at this 10 year mark the concepts and methodology for measuring food insecurity and hunger and the uses of the measure In Phase 2 of the study the panel was to consider in more depth the issues raised in Phase 1 relating to the concepts and methods used to measure food security and make recommendations as appropriate The Committee on National Statistics appointed a panel of 10 experts to examine the above issues In order to provide timely guidance to USDA the panel issued an interim Phase 1 report Measuring Food Insecurity and Hunger Phase 1 Report That report presented the panel s preliminary assessments of the food security concepts and definitions the appropriateness of identifying hunger as a severe range of food insecurity in such a survey based measurement method questions for measuring these concepts and the appropriateness of a household survey for regularly monitoring food security in the U S population It provided interim guidance for the continued production of the food security estimates This final report primarily focuses on the Phase 2 charge The major findings and conclusions based on the panel s review and deliberations are summarized

Michael Murphy,Cheryl A. Wehler,Maria E. Pagano,Michelle Little,Ronald E. Kleinman,Michael S. Jellinek,1998 Using large scale surveys from nine states the Community Childhood Hunger Identification Project CCHIP estimates that 8% of American children under the age of 12 years experience hunger each year

CCHIP operationalizes child hunger as multiple experiences of parent reported food insufficiency due to constrained resources The current study examined the relationship between food insufficiency and school age low income children s psychosocial functioning The study also assessed the interinformant parent versus child reliability and time to time reliability of the CCHIP measure Method Two hundred four school age children and their parents from four inner city public schools were interviewed using parent teacher and clinician report measures of psychosocial functioning Ninety six children and their parents were reinterviewed 4 months later Hungry and at risk for hunger children were twice as likely as not hungry children to be classified as having impaired functioning by parent and child report Teachers reported higher levels of hyperactivity absenteeism and tardiness among hungry at risk children than not hungry children Parent and child reports of hunger were significantly related to each other and time to time reliability of the CCHIP measure was acceptable Results of this study suggest that intermittent experiences of food insufficiency and hunger as measured by CCHIP are associated with poor behavioral and academic functioning in low income children The current study also supports the validity and reliability of the CCHIP measure for assessing hunger in children Hidden Hunger H.K. Malnutrition caused by deficiencies of vitamins and minerals also called hidden hunger impairs both the intellectual and physical development of a child Due to the absence of clinical symptoms and assessments no intervention can be staged The tragedy is that this in turn decreases the child s chance to escape from poverty This book looks at malnutrition in high income countries the nutrition transition and nutritional deficiencies in low income countries consequences of hidden hunger and interventions to improve nutrition security Written by leading experts in the field it clearly stresses that national governments and international organizations must make malnutrition one of their top priorities in order to provide children with optimal conditions for a healthy future Policy Report of the Hartford Community Childhood Hunger
