Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2010-02-05 Care for patients who have suffered major trauma for example following a road accident or a fall has not significantly improved in the last 20 years despite numerous reports identifying poor practice and services are not being delivered efficiently or effectively Survival rates vary significantly with a range from five unexpected survivors to eight unexpected deaths per 100 trauma patients reflecting the variable quality of care 450 to 600 lives could be saved each year in England if major trauma care was managed more effectively For best outcomes care should be led by consultants experienced in major trauma but major trauma is most likely to occur at night and at weekends when consultants are not normally in the emergency department Major trauma care is not coordinated and there are no formal arrangements for taking patients directly for specialist treatment or transferring them between hospitals A significant number of patients that need a scan CT do not receive one Not enough patients who need a critical care bed are given one Access to rehabilitation services varies and patients are not always receiving the care that they need The estimated annual lost economic output from deaths and serious injuries from major trauma is between 3.3 billion and 3.7 billion Only 60 per cent of hospitals delivering major trauma care contribute to the Trauma Audit and Research Network TARN The performance of the 40 per cent of hospitals that do not submit data to TARN cannot be measured Emergency and Trauma Care for

Multislice CT M.F. Reiser, M.
Takahashi, M. Modic, R. Bruening, 2012-12-06 The introduction of multidetector spiral CT into clinical practice is without any doubt one of the most important technical developments in the field of computed tomography in general and spiral CT in particular in recent years Indeed multislice CT technology based on the spiral CT technique invented by W Kalender almost 20 years ago has opened immense and totally new perspectives for better utilisation of contrast medium during the examination for optimal multiplanar reconstruction and for increased patient throughput The potential applications more specifically in the area of CT angiography of the brain and the heart and vessels are most interesting and definitely contribute to better patient care as well as to more efficient utilisation of equipment These exciting new clinical applications explain the keen desire of radiologists and other clinicians to hear and learn more about the first results obtained with this new equipment in daily clinical practice This book will satisfy their needs Professor Maximilian F Reiser was among the first to install multidetector CT in his department in Munich and to gain experience with this new radiological tool He was also able to organise a very successful and well attended international meeting on this hot topic as early as z 2000 in Starnberg Germany
