Grasshopper Dissection

Introduction:

Insects are arthropods with jointed appendages, segmented bodies, and an exoskeleton composed of chitin. Insects are in the class Insecta, & are the largest and most diverse group of animals on earth. Insects have three body regions (head, thorax, & abdomen), 3 pairs of legs attached to the thorax, a single pair of antenna attached to the head, mouthparts adapted for chewing or sucking, and two pairs of wings. Some insects may have a single pair of wings or be wingless. Insect legs are often adapted for digging, crawling, jumping, or swimming. The insects are mostly terrestrial; they breathe air which enters small lateral openings on the body called spiracles and circulates in a system of ducts to all organs and tissues. Their chewing or sucking mouth parts are adapted for feeding on plant or animal materials.

Objective:

Identify & label the anatomy of a grasshopper

Materials:

Lab coat, goggles, dissecting pan, dissecting kit with forceps & scalpel, pins, magnifying glass, preserved grasshopper

Safety:

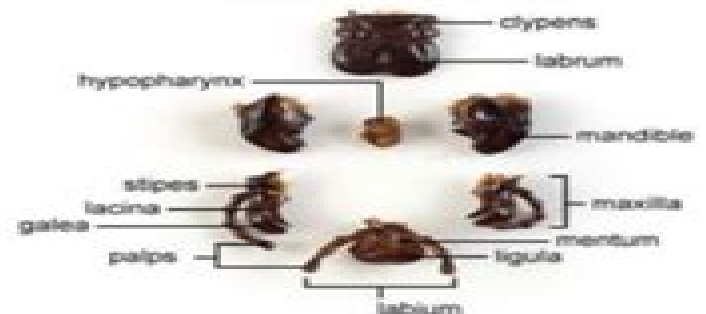

Preservatives used on grasshopper can irritate your skin. Avoid touching your eyes while working with the grasshopper

Procedure:

External Anatomy

1. Place grasshopper in the dissecting pan. Touch the chitinous exoskeleton.
2. Observe that the body of the grasshopper is divided into 3 regions — the head, the thorax, and abdomen. Label these.
3. Using the hand lens, examine the head. Locate and draw the following parts:
 - Two long antennae- sensory organs for touch located at top
 - Two large Compound eyes- located laterally, sensory organ for vision
 - Three simple eyes or ocelli- between compound eyes and at each antennae base, sensory organ for vision

The Moriah Ruse Marvin Wiebener,2009-12 CIA Director Margaret Winters attended the morning intelligence briefing in the situation room as she d done every day since Iran s president made public his threat to wipe Israel off the map Facing her was the very real and complex nature of her nearly impossible task to provide the president of the United States who was under pressure to intercede with actionable information The president makes it clear that no American combatant will set foot on fly over or park a naval ship off the Iranian coast until absolute and irrefutable proof exists that Iran is an imminent threat What happens next is a grueling dangerous and heart wrenching quest for intelligence that could cost lives but stop a world war Winters has her marching orders trouble is a senior CIA official along with an overly ambitious congressman wants the director to fail Aware of her detractors wishes Winters crafts a plan to secure proof the president needs that bypassed the customary collection and analysis of raw intelligence Her proposal shocks everyone in the tight circle of those with a need to know and when the plan appears to go terribly wrong she must take matters into her own hands With the lives of a patriotic few caught in a clandestine mission those keeping us safe people whose stories will likely never be told face dire straits in hopes of preventing the unthinkable a war unlike any seen before Hope teases all involved with the birth of a plan so incredible it just may work The Moriah Ruse

Study of Grasshopper Leg Structure and Respiratory Volume Using Micro-CT Technique, and Nanoindentation Study of Cockroach Cuticle
Rajib Krishna Shaha, University of Wyoming. Mechanical Engineering Department, 2013 This thesis consists of two main parts and each part represents a separate study with distinct objectives In the first part a feasibility study for building a Finite Element FE model of a grasshopper leg was conducted The second part contains a general method that was developed for computation of the respiratory volume of insects and this method was then applied to the grasshoppers to compare results from this method with respiratory volume from other established methods Grasshoppers have an amazing physical capability during jumping The grasshopper leg provides energy for jumping and it also sustains high forces during jumping For bio mimicry of the grasshopper leg structure a FE model of the leg is desired for studying the mechanics at different loading conditions Distinguishing between exoskeleton and muscles in the leg and measuring the elastic modulus of the leg exoskeleton are two of the foremost requirements for making a FE model of the grasshopper leg Therefore the first part of this work describes two studies assessing the feasibility of developing a FE model of the grasshopper leg Micro CT micro computed tomography imaging of a grasshopper leg was carried out to evaluate if this technique is a viable option for distinguishing exoskeleton and muscles Then a nanoindentation study on cockroach cuticle was done to assess the applicability of this technique for determining the elastic modulus of cuticle of insects such as the grasshopper From the micro CT scans a high resolution high contrast 3D image of a grasshopper leg was generated To obtain high quality images special sample preparation was required Fixative chemicals preserved the internal structure of the sample leg and staining chemicals allowed for high contrast by increasing the x ray attenuation gradient between soft tissues and the exoskeleton The image obtained from the micro CT scans was processed with image processing software and then studied to distinguish exoskeleton and muscle inside the leg Further image processing allowed for identification of features that potentially make the leg capable of sustaining high loads during jumping without experiencing failure Nanoindentation has been established as a prominent way for finding the mechanical properties of softer biological materials In this part of study nanoindentation was applied on cockroach cuticles to examine the feasibility of this technique on cuticle of grasshoppers and other insects Cockroach cuticle was chosen as it was readily available in the lab sample extraction was straightforward and samples of the appropriate size were suitably flat Cockroach cuticle samples from multiple locations on the cockroach body allowed for assessment of the variability in elastic modulus Further several methodological issues needed to be addressed during application of nanoindentation on the cockroach cuticle With a careful choice of testing parameters and indentation locations the quantitative distribution of elastic modulus was determined successfully from samples from different locations of the cockroach body Hence nanoindentation appears to be a viable technique to obtain elastic modulus of cuticle of other insects such as grasshopper Respiratory volume in any insect is an important part of insect physiology So in addition to studying the grasshopper leg an approach to compute the respiratory volume of a grasshopper was also developed in the second part of this research work The whole bodies of eight grasshoppers were scanned A Matlab code was developed to apply image processing of micro CT scans and to develop a fast and inexpensive method for respiratory volume determination Estimates of respiratory volume using this new approach closely matched estimates from previous studies and new estimates using an alternative volume displacement technique validating this new approach of respiratory volume determination for future studies
