American Cinema Culture 4th Edition

Film, Form, and Culture Robert Kolker, 2015-08-14 Film Form and Culture 4th edition offers a lively introduction to both the formal and cultural aspects of film. With extensive analysis of films past and present, this textbook explores film from part to whole, from the smallest unit of the shot to the way shots are edited together to create narrative. It then examines those narratives, both fiction and non-fiction, as stories and genres that speak to the culture of their time and our perceptions of them today. Composition, editing, genres such as the gangster film, the Western, science fiction, and melodrama are analyzed alongside numerous images to illustrate the discussion. Chapters on the individuals who make films—the production designer, cinematographer, editor, composer, producer, director, and actor—illustrate the collaborative nature of filmmaking. This new edition includes an expanded discussion of the digital revolution in filmmaking, exploring the movement from celluloid to digital recording and editing of images, as well as the use of CGI. A new chapter on international cinema that covers filmmaking from Italy to Mumbai offers students a broader understanding of cinema on a worldwide scale. A new chapter on film acting that uses images to create a small catalogue of gestures and expressions that are recognizable in film after film. Expanded content coverage and in-depth analysis throughout, including a visual analysis of a scene from Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight. An expanded chapter on the cultural contexts of film summarizes the theories of cultural and media studies, concluding with a comparative analysis of Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo and Judd Apatow's This Is 40. Over 260 images, many in color, that create a visual index to and illustration of the discussion of films and filmmaking. Each chapter ends with updated suggestions for further reading and viewing, and there is an expanded glossary of terms. Additional resources for students and teachers can also be found on the companion website www.routledge.com/cw/kolker, which includes additional case studies, discussion questions, and links to useful websites. This textbook is an invaluable and exciting resource for students beginning film studies at the undergraduate level.

American Cinema/American Culture John Belton, 2021 This book introduces the reader to basic issues related to the phenomenon of American cinema. It looks at American film history from the 1890s through the spring of 2020 but it does not always explore this history in a purely chronological way. In fact, it is not strictly speaking a history. Rather, it is a cultural history which focuses more on topics and issues than on what happened when. It begins with a profile of classical Hollywood cinema as a unique economic, industrial, aesthetic, and cultural institution. It considers the experience of moviegoing, the nature of Hollywood storytelling, and the roles played by the studio system, the star system, and film genres in the creation of a body of work that functions not only as entertainment but as a portrait of the relationship between an American national identity and an industrialized mass culture that has slowly evolved over the past century. This book assumes that the reader has little or no formal training in film history, theory, or aesthetics. It presents fairly basic concepts in such a way as to encourage discussion, not so much of individual films but of films in general. For this reason, the book concentrates on large groupings of films on genres, topics, and periods of film history. This textbook differs from the more traditional histories of the cinema for certain specific and important reasons. Over the past fifty years, the field of film study has undergone a tremendous transformation. This change has been spearheaded by the work of a new generation of scholars who challenge the traditional way in which film history has been written and taught. Introduction to Film courses that fifty years ago taught film as art drew heavily upon the approaches of New Criticism. Contemporary film courses now teach film not only as art but also as film, and they attempt to situate film as an art form within a larger industrial, economic, social, and cultural context. They rely heavily on cultural studies, new historicism, psychoanalysis, and other contemporary critical disciplines. Film history texts have changed over the years as well. In the past, histories consisted of simple chronological accounts of who did what and what happened when, and of the stories of great men, their achievements, and of straightforward accounts of the influence of technology and economics on the course of a history that unfolds in a linear fashion up to the present. More recently, film scholars have begun to rewrite these traditional histories, creating what Thomas Elsaesser refers to as the New Film History. At its best, this history is driven by a sophisticated, theoretically informed revisionism. It simply refuses to accept the easy answers to basic historical questions that had been offered up by past historians. With the initial publication of American Cinema/American Culture in 1994, the methods and discoveries of the New Film History were applied to an introductory level text surveying the history of the American cinema.

Film, Form, and Culture Robert Kolker, 2016 This textbook offers a lively introduction to both the formal and cultural aspects of film. With extensive in-depth analysis of films past and present, it explores film from part to whole and then examines the narratives created, both fiction and non-fiction, as stories and genres that speak to the culture of their time. This new edition includes expanded content coverage throughout, including discussion of the digital revolution, new chapters on international cinema and film acting, and an expanded chapter on the cultural contexts of film. It is also illustrated with over 260 images, mainly in colour, that create a visual index to and illustration of the discussion of films and filmmaking.

Film, Form, and Culture Robert Phillip Kolker, 2001-07

Here's Looking at You Ernest D. Giglio, 2010 Now in its third edition Here's Looking at You: Hollywood Film and Politics examines the tangled relationship between politics and Hollywood which manifests itself in celebrity involvement in political campaigns and elections and in the overt and covert political messages conveyed by Hollywood films The book's findings contradict the film industry's assertion that it is simply in the entertainment business and examines how while the majority of Hollywood films are strictly commercial ventures hundreds of movies ranging from Birth of a Nation to Capitalism do indeed contain political messages This new edition has been updated with new photos and cartoons and includes two new chapters one on Afghan/Iraqi war films and the other on the treatment of race and gender in Hollywood films that are sure to stimulate discussion Here's Looking at You serves as a basic text for political film courses and as a supplement in American government and film studies courses and will also appeal to film buffs and people in the film industry

Film, Form, and Culture Robert P. Kolker, Marsha Gordon, 2024-03-29 This fifth edition of Film Form and Culture offers a lively introduction to both the formal and cultural aspects of film. With extensive analysis of films past and present, this textbook explores how films are constructed from part to whole, from the smallest unit of the shot to the way shots are edited together to create narrative. Robert P. Kolker and Marsha Gordon demystify the technical aspects of filmmaking and demonstrate how fiction and nonfiction films engage with culture. Over 265 images provide a visual index to the films and issues being discussed. This new edition includes an expanded examination of digital filmmaking and distribution in the age of streaming, attention to superhero films throughout, a significantly longer chapter on global cinema with new or enlarged sections on a variety of national cinemas including cinema from Nigeria, Senegal, Burkina Faso, South Korea, Japan, India, Belgium, and Iran; new or expanded discussions of directors including Alice Guy, Blach, Lois Weber, Oscar Micheaux, Agnès Varda, Spike Lee, Julie Dash, Jafar Panahi, Ava DuVernay, Jane Campion, Jean Pierre and Luc Dardenne, and Penny Lane; and new in-depth explorations of films including Within Our Gates (1919), Black Girl (1966), Creed (2015), Moonlight (2016), Wonder Woman (2017), Get Out (2017), Black Panther (2018), Parasite (2019), Da 5 Bloods (2020), The French Dispatch (2021), The Power of the Dog (2021), RRR (2022), and T r (2022). This textbook is an invaluable and exciting resource for students beginning film studies at the undergraduate level. Additional resources for students and teachers can be found on the eResource, which includes case studies, discussion questions, and links to useful websites.

Film, Form, and Culture Robert Phillip Kolker, 2002 This DVD-ROM enhances the discussions in the text with visual examples and provides close interactive analysis of moving images from classic and recent film. It is designed to play in computer DVD drives rather than standard DVD players and can be used alone or in conjunction with the text.

The Cultures of American Film Robert Phillip Kolker, 2015 The Cultures of American Film integrates a number of approaches to the study of movies. Its chronological organization provides a historical overview, a survey of films across the decades from cinema's invention to the present. Its analytical approach addresses form and content, how films work, and how we respond to them. By putting films in their cultural contexts, it examines how films fit into our lives and their own, that is, the life of film itself: the technologies that made them possible, the studios in which they were made, the filmmakers' struggles with politics and censorship. The Cultures of American Film covers movements, directions, and directors, genres, the structures of films, and their audiences. American film and its audience engage in a process of ongoing negotiation: will a film gain an audience? What kind of audience? A broad one consisting of ages 18-46, the demographic most desired? Will the film have legs, bringing in more viewers by word of mouth and repeat viewers? Will a film be made for a smaller audience, made with a small budget and perhaps attempting to experiment somewhat with form and content? What do you, as a viewer, expect from a film? Do you want simple entertainment, an escape from the everyday? Do you want a film to engage in complex emotions or even ideas? What satisfies you most when you see a film? Do you respond most to acting and the presence of stars? Do you like digital spectacle with superheroes? Do you prefer more intimate dramas or films with sex and violence? All of this and more make up the cultures of American film. Production and reception that's you, the viewer, responding to a film, the history of events surrounding and sometimes absorbed by a film, the ways in which film speaks to us and we to it, constitute a constellation of events and interactions that we will examine in the course of this book. In chronological order, we will analyze the ways in which films work as part of the cultures of their own making, as well as the larger structures of their society. We will make general observations and close analyses of particular films, talk about how and why films are made, and investigate the kinds of responses that they require and desire. Included at the end of each chapter are suggestions for further reading and suggestions for further critical analysis of the issues presented in the chapter. The aim, finally, is not to be inclusive but rather an attempt to discover connections, interactions, even surprises when film, its makers, its audience, and the culture they are part of interact.
