

- Tim O'Brien – served as a soldier in Vietnam from 1968-72. Against the war, protested, but he was drafted. Considered going to Canada and dodging the draft, but afraid of what people would think, he reported for duty.
- Structure – discuss something once and return to it several times, impersonal at first, but with more details and feelings each time. Effect of losing physical things they carried – sense of exhaustion, contrast to figurative things they carried – emotions, responsibilities
- Jimmy and Martha – Jimmy pretends that Martha loves him, abuses at her letters and pictures. She doesn't love him, but he makes up the relationship to take his mind away from the war, a way to escape. Effect – he didn't always pay attention to what was happening around him, didn't insist on strict field discipline, but while he was thinking about her, his burdens were lifted, and he carried nothing.
- The Things They Carried – memory, reminders of home, superstitions, good-luck charms, responsibility, fear, seas, ghosts, each other, own lives, Vietnam, their reputations, pressure, grief, terror, love, longing
- Searching the Tunnels – three die, one person explored the VC tunnels, others imagined what it was like in there – claustrophobia, tunnel collapse, ambush. Lee Strunk comes out, and just when it seems safe, Alexander is shot by a sniper. Others feel surprised and lucky to be alive, not dead.
- Ted Lamberson – carried tranquilizers and dope, his way of coping and escaping the war, dies with no warning, "napped while zipping" – death could happen at any time, with no warning.
- Jimmy's Guilt – he loved Martha more than his men, didn't pay attention to his men because he was thinking about her. Excuse – "a kid at war, in love." Crisis, he hated Martha, blamed her for what had happened. Burns letters – symbol of loss of innocence, death of childhood. He was not to think of her again. Plans to be a better soldier and put the safety of his men first, even if they don't like it. Or he might not.
- War – not battle, an endless march, no mission, no purpose, nothing won or lost, the same thing over and over. Moments of panic – must save face, afraid of dying, but even more afraid to show it. Killed and died because they were afraid not to. Died so as not to die of embarrassment. Too frightened to be cowards. Shrieked at those who shot themselves, but envied them. Imagined tying down their burdens, be light and free.
