

OPTIONAL ELECTRICAL SYSTEMS

Your electrical system is powered by a marine grade 12 volt battery similar to that in your automobile, but more attention should be paid to maintaining the proper level of distilled water. Do not overfill.

The battery is provided with a tie-down to prevent its tipping over at extreme angles of heel. Be sure this tie-down is fastened.

Each electrical circuit is fused under a screw cover and spares should be obtained before long cruises. The system is also controlled by a sparkproof switch. You should be sure that your boat is free of gasoline fumes before using the electrical system. On inboard models, run the blower for a few minutes before starting.

The circular sparkproof switch has the markings 1, 2, and "ALL" as well as "OFF". If you have ordered both the inboard engine and the extra battery option you can selectively charge the battery, with the engine alternator. Many experienced cruisers use Battery #1 for electrical lighting needs and keep #2 in reserve for starting the engine.

When the engine is running, NEVER pass thru the OFF position to change from one battery to the other or the alternator diodes will be burned out. Switching from one battery to another should only be done with the engine IDLING, or while stopped. If both batteries are of equal charge, keep the selector switch on ALL position, and use ALL to start the engine if both batteries are low.
