Weaving A California Tradition

Weaving a California Tradition, 1997-01-01 Follows an eleven year old Western Mono Indian as she and her relatives prepare materials needed for basketweaving make the baskets and attend the California Indian Basketweavers Association s annual gathering

Chimayó Weaving Helen R. Lucero,Suzanne Baizerman,1999 Taken together these perspectives form a case study of the adaptability of a craft tradition to the modern world

Resiliency of Native American Women Basket Weavers from California, Great Basin, and the Southwest Meranda Diane Roberts,2018 Abstract Native American women from the American Southwest have always used basket weaving to maintain relationships with nature their spirituality tribal histories sovereignty and their ancestors However since the late nineteenth century with the emergence of a tremendous tourist industry in the American West non Indians have perceived Native American basketry as a commoditized practice with no connection to tribal traditions or spirituality Non Indians often viewed Native American women basket weavers as submissive individuals who became part of the market economy and abandoned their tribal traditions In the early twentieth century anthropologists and art historians believed in the narrative of the Vanishing Indian which led museum officials to collect baskets as the last remnants of a once proud people Officials maintained these ideas until the 1990 s During the last decade of the twentieth century Native Americans scholars pushed back against these dominant narratives by acknowledging the harsh realities of settler colonialism Even more extraordinary researchers placed Native American women at the center of their arguments to affirm their adherence to cultural traditions and their continual commitment to tribal continuity Despite these accomplishments however scholars have not applied this research to American Indian women basket weavers Because of this absence in the historiography numerous non Natives continue to believe indigenous basketry of the American West is an art form that lacks traditional methods continuity techniques and cultural connections to communities To combat these preconceptions the following dissertation will examine the lives and works of four Native American basket weavers from California and Nevada Basketry has always been a way to honor traditional values and assert a woman s individual sovereignty as a tribal member and artist This is because since ancestral times American Indian basketry has played a significant role in indigenous communities in California and Eastern Nevada More importantly this dissertation will focus on exploring the tremendous amount of power these women exerted when establishing boundaries over who they would teach their art form Overall the four indigenous women in this dissertation all show that basket weaving manifests unique pieces of art and have always been an important part of their identities and communities Pages iv v

Essential Art Brian Bibby,2012 A treasury of selected pieces from the California Indian Heritage Center this collection reflects the scale and scope of baskets created by nearly every weaving tradition in Cali fornia over the last century This book conveys the dual nature of beauty and practicality that baskets presented as a part of daily life and as a growing example of unique art a careful selection of the best beautifully presented

Basket Weavers for the California Curio Trade Marvin Cohodas, 2019-12-03 The peoples of northwestern California's Lower Klamath River area have long been known for their fine basketry. Two early twentieth century weavers of that region, Elizabeth Hickox and her daughter Louise, created especially distinctive baskets that are celebrated today for their elaboration of technique, form, and surface designs. Marvin Cohodas now explores the various forces that influenced Elizabeth Hickox, analyzing her relationship with the curio trade and specifically with dealer Grace Nicholson, to show how those associations affected the development and marketing of baskets. He explains the techniques and patterns that Hickox created to meet the challenge of weaving design into changing three-dimensional forms. In addition to explicating the Hickoxes' basketry, Cohodas interprets its uniqueness as a form of intersocietal art, showing how Elizabeth first designed her distinctive trinket basket to convey a particular view of the curio trade and its effect on status within her community. Through its close examination of these superb practitioners of basketry, Basket Weavers for the California Curio Trade addresses many of today's most pressing questions in Native American art studies concerning individuality, patronage, and issues of authenticity. Graced with historic photographs and full-color plates, it reveals the challenges faced by early twentieth-century Native weavers. Published with the assistance of The Southwest Museum, Los Angeles.

The Song of the Loom Frederick J. Dockstader, 1987-83 contemporary masterpieces in color featuring many ceremonial Chant weaves. Full documentation.

Weaving a Legacy Sharon E. Dean, 2004 Situated on the western edge of the Great Basin between the Sierra Nevada and White Inyo mountain ranges, Owens Valley has been home for thousands of years to the Owens Valley Paiute and their southern neighbors, the Panamint Shoshone. The willow baskets both groups created are noteworthy for their complex construction and durability, and their materials and designs reflected available resources as well as the seminomadic existence that characterized life in the Great Basin for generations. Since the mid-nineteenth-century arrival of non-Indians into the Valley, the baskets have changed. Weaving a Legacy places those changes in the context of the region's dramatic social history. In addition, the volume closely examines basketry techniques and technology, historic weavers and their lineages, contemporary weavers, and basket collectors. The text is extensively illustrated with black and white photographs of people, landscapes, and baskets. Among the legacies of these baskets are the stories they evoke, many of which the authors recount in this beautiful work.

Traditions in Transition Barbara Mauldin, 1984

'Ike Ulana Lau Hala Lia O'Neill M. A. Keawe, Marsha MacDowell, C. Kurt Dewhurst, 2014-08-31 The weaving of lau hala represents a living tradition borne on the great arc of Pacific voyaging history This thriving tradition is made immediate by masters of the art who transmit their knowledge to those who are similarly devoted to and delighted by the smoothness softness and that particular warm fragrance of a woven lau hala treasure The third volume in the Hawai inui kea series Ike Ulana Lau Hala is an intriguing collection of articles and images about the Hawaiian tradition of ulana lau hala the weaving by hand of dried Pandanus tectorius leaves Ike Ulana Lau Hala considers the humble hala leaf through several very different lenses an analysis of lau hala items that occur in historic photographs from the Bishop Museum collections the ecological history on hala in Hawai i and the Pacific including serious challenges to its survival and strategies to prevent its extinction perspectives in Hawaiian of a native speaker from Ni ihau on master weavers and the relationship between teacher and learner a review also in Hawaiian of references to lau hala in poetical sayings and idioms a survey of lau hala in Hawaiian cultural heritage and the documentation project underway to share the art with a broader audience and a conversation with a master artisan known for his distinct and intricate construction of the lei hala Rich with imagery this extraordinary volume will guide the reader to a better understanding of the cultural scope and importance of lau hala fostering an appreciation of the level of excellence to which the art of ulana lau hala has risen under the guidance of masters who continue to steer the Hawaiian form of the tradition into the future

The Fine Art of California Indian Basketry Brian Bibby, 1996 Presents over sixty examples of beautiful California Indian basketry with commentary upon each basket by native basketweavers scholars and California Indian artists in other media

On the Border, 1991

Indigenizing Southern California Indian Basket Studies Yve B. Chavez, 2012 This thesis provides a much needed examination of early and contemporary basket weaving practices in Southern California from an indigenous perspective and through an art historical lens It deconstructs outdated misconceptions about aboriginal basket weaving practices and cultural identity in Southern California In 1922 Alfred Kroeber wrote the first anthropological account of Mission Indian baskets Kroeber used the word Mission to describe a specific style of basket weaving attributed to certain indigenous communities based in Southern California This thesis explains why the term Mission is problematic when used to categorize baskets I argue it is best that museums and collectors identify a basket by the name of the weaver who made it and his or her tribe Some scholars have tried to argue that traditional indigenous arts only existed in the past but this thesis proves that tradition changes as a result of outside native and non native influences and new ideas

The Navajo Weaving Tradition Alice Kaufman, Christopher Selser, 1999 Navajo textiles have been avidly sought after and collected for more than two hundred years and provide examples of both historic and contemporary primitive art Navajo Weaving Tradition is a detailed history and appreciation of these wonderful textiles

Interweaving Traditions Amy R. Cooper, Elizabeth Moller Lindsley, 1983 The exhibition included woven Native American artifacts as well as contemporary works by Elizabeth Moller Lindsley

Weavers of Tradition and Beauty Mary Lee Fulkerson, 1995 Weavers of Tradition and Beauty presents new information on contemporary Native American basketry of the Great Basin largely from the viewpoint of the weavers themselves Baskets and the people who weave them have always been revered and honored by Native Americans Fulkerson and Curtis depict in vivid text and both full color and black and white photographs how their art prevails even over adverse environmental social and economic conditions
