

Chemistry iCAP#23: Qualitative Analysis Flowchart Practice

Name _____ Date _____ Block _____ GRN GOLD

Background:

In the qualitative analysis lab, you will ultimately be responsible for identifying a series of unknown ion solutions. In order to be able to do this, you will first collect data from a group of experiments involving these ions.

Lab Details:

The ions being tested are: Pb^{+2} , Ag^{+1} , Fe^{+3} , and Ni^{+2} . You will receive solutions that contain the ions individually, and a solution that contains all 4 ions.

Basic Characteristics of Ions

Fill in the following chart with the formulas of the compounds formed when your 4 ions react with other ions in solution. Indicate by circling them if they would result in the formation of a precipitate.

	Pb^{+2}	Ag^{+1}	Fe^{+3}	Ni^{+2}
Cl^{-1}
CrO_4^{-2}
OH^{-1}

The circled compounds in the table above will be those that will help you to determine the identity of your unknown ions.

Creation of a "Scheme" or Flowchart

One of the first assignments during the lab (after preliminary tests have been completed) will be the creation of a flowchart. This flowchart will help you to more clearly see how you can narrow down the identity of your unknown ion solutions.

Using this sample information, create a flowchart that will "separate" the ions for analysis.

Example:

Suppose a solution contains either of the ions A^{+2} or B^{+} . It is known that A^{+2} reacts with C^{-} to produce a yellow precipitate, while B^{+} reacts with C^{-} to form a green precipitate.

Identifying which ion is present in solution only requires additions of C^{-} to the solution and observation of the resultant precipitate color. Difficulty arises if the solution contains both ions, however. In this case, the combination might result in a slightly lighter green precipitate, making it difficult to determine if the solution contained only B^{+} or both ions. The presence of B^{+} interferes with the test for A^{+2} and vice versa.

The strategy for investigating solutions with multiple ions is to find chemical reactions that will first separate the ions. Once the separation has been accomplished, the ions can be tested and identified individually. For example, in the case of the A^{+2} and B^{+} mixture, it is found that the addition of base will result in the formation of $\text{A}(\text{OH})_2$ which is insoluble and precipitates from solution. In contrast, B^{+} does not react with the base and remains as an ion in solution.

Dutiful Daughter Josina M. van der Maas, 2013-05-10 The memoirs are based on the many letters the author sent home to her family in the Netherlands from 1953 to 1955 during which she attended Vassar College as a foreign student and then continued on to graduate school in the fall of 1955 These letters saved by the authors father and found among his papers after his death in 1987 describe both her ordinary and extraordinary experiences Coming from post war Europe during its painful recovery and the economic problems of that period she had very limited means and possessions The letters describe her worries about money and finding warm clothes to get through the harsh winters but they are also full of joy about the many wonderful opportunities and experiences offered to her Throughout she feels a strong responsibility and duty to her parents to keep them informed and is often concerned about how much of a burden she is to them even this far away Just out of high school when she comes to Vassar College she is almost immediately faced with what her future is going to be from then on and she has to make some tough decisions all along the way which ultimately result in her becoming an American citizen leaving behind her family and her country

2017-2018 Assessment of the Army Research Laboratory. National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Laboratory Assessments Board, Army Research Laboratory Technical Assessment Board, 2019-08-15.

The Army Research Laboratory (ARL) is the corporate laboratory for the U.S. Army, which bridges scientific and military communities. The ARL is critical in maintaining the United States' dominant military power through its advanced research and analysis capabilities. The National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine's Army Research Laboratory Technical Assessment Board (ARLTAB) conducts biennial assessments of the scientific and technical quality of the facilities. These assessments are necessary to ensure that the ARL's resources and quality of programs are maximized.

2017-2018 Assessment of the Army Research Laboratory includes findings and recommendations regarding the quality of the ARL's research, development, and analysis programs. The report of the assessment is subdivided by the ARL's Science and Technology campaigns, including:

- Materials Research
- Sciences for Lethality and Protection
- Information Sciences
- Computational Sciences
- Sciences for Maneuver
- Human Sciences and Analysis and Assessment

This biennial report summarizes the findings for the
