DUI Law Enforcement Strategies is an authoritative, insiders perspective on the procedures utilized by law enforcement officers for correctly identifying a potential DUI offense and making an arrest. Featuring law enforcement officials from across the country, these experts guide the reader through the key steps in the process of determining whether or not someone is driving while under the influence from the initial traffic stop to testifying in court. Discussing the role and responsibilities of the arresting officer in a DUI case, the authors explain how results from faceto- face observations, roadside field sobriety tests, and scientific blood-alcohol screenings are interpreted and what measures are taken to eliminate error. From the types of DUI training available to law enforcement officers and the most effective ways of documenting evidence to the preparation necessary to appear as a court witness, these officers break down the common misconceptions regarding law enforcement involvement with DUI violations and provide insight on how these cases are handled in court. DUI Law Enforcement Strategies is an eye-opening resource for prosecutors and defense attorneys alike on understanding how law enforcement actions and documentation can impact a case. The different niches represented and the breadth of perspectives presented enable readers to get inside some of the great law enforcement minds of today, as these experienced officers offer up their thoughts around the keys to navigating this increasingly-regulated legal issue. This book investigates and exposes the ultimate goal of DUI law enforcement, which is to generate a steady income for their policing business. Their claim, of course, is that their only goal is keeping the public safe, and has nothing to do with money. The author, George Damusis, reveals the deceitfulness and hypocrisy of that claim. He argues that it's a form of tyranny and a violation of human rights to arrest, criminalize, extort, and virtually enslave common, decent citizens for a year just for drinking moderately before driving. Mr. Damusis suggests that the arrests and criminalization of common, decent citizens for the very common human act of drinking moderately before driving is the real crime. Unbiased traffic accident research indicates that moderately intoxicated drivers cause no more accidents than alcohol free drivers. So, what rule of logic allows law enforcement to declare these common citizens to be criminals? While Mr. Damusis does agree that the best and most rational safety policy is to not drink any alcohol at all before driving, he also insists that those who do drink in moderation before driving are not criminals by any stretch of the imagination. They are, after all, doing only what millions of social drinking drivers do so naturally every weekend in this our government supported, alcohol permissive culture. These common citizens are only charged with an actual crime in order to make it legal to arrest and fine them repeatedly. It's clearly a case of policing for profit, and not a case of policing for public safety. Mr. Damusis is not a law professional, and received no professional mentoring in the writing of this book. His arguments are a product of his personal experiences, the experiences of others, and his serious internet research. This book severely criticizes our oppressive DUI laws and DUI enforcement policies, but also offers constructive proposals for bringing moral reform to the entire DUI law enforcement system. But even these threats often do not suffice to motivate people to defend vigorously against DUI charges. Many people just want to act as quickly as possible to "get the DUI out of the way," so that they won't have to worry about it anymore. In other words, some folks approach DUI charges like they approach traffic tickets. They think they can just "pay the fine," metaphorically speaking, and move on. This is a big, tragic mistake. A DUI is not like a traffic ticket. It's a serious offense. If you plead guilty to a misdemeanor DUI charge, for instance, that means you have a criminal record. So don't plead guilty during your arraignment for DUI. You might have legal defenses that you don't even know exist. Attorney Martens has personally seen people with a 0.05% blood alcohol concentration plead guilty to DUI because they didn't have an attorney. For reference, the legal limit here in California is 0.08% BAC. In other words, he's seen people who were barely more than half way to 0.08% accept a misdemeanor on their records for no good reason.
