

6. Figure 11-4 is a diagram of the frontal section of the heart. Follow the instructions below to complete this exercise.

First, draw arrows to indicate the direction of blood flow through the heart. Draw the pathway of the oxygen-rich blood with red arrows, and trace the pathway of oxygen-poor blood with blue arrows.

Second, identify each of the elements of the intrinsic conduction system (numbers 1-5 on the figure) by inserting the appropriate terms in the blanks left of the figure. Then, indicate with green arrows the pathway that impulses take through this system.

Third, correctly identify each of the heart valves (numbers 6-9 on the figure) by inserting the appropriate terms in the blanks left of the figure, and draw in and identify by name the cordlike structures that anchor the flaps of the atrioventricular (AV) valves.

Fourth, use the numbers from the figure to identify the structures described below. Place the numbers in the lettered answer blanks.

- 6 A. 7 B. Prevent backflow into the ventricles when the heart is relaxed
- 8 C. 9 D. Prevent backflow into the atria when the ventricles are contracting
- 9 E. AV valve with three flaps
- 8 F. AV valve with two flaps
- 1 G. The pacemaker of the intrinsic conduction system
- 2 H. The point in the intrinsic conduction system where the impulse is temporarily delayed

Regulation of Tissue Oxygenation, Second Edition Roland N. Pittman, 2016-08-18 This presentation describes various aspects of the regulation of tissue oxygenation including the roles of the circulatory system respiratory system and blood the carrier of oxygen within these components of the cardiorespiratory system The respiratory system takes oxygen from the atmosphere and transports it by diffusion from the air in the alveoli to the blood flowing through the pulmonary capillaries The cardiovascular system then moves the oxygenated blood from the heart to the microcirculation of the various organs by convection where oxygen is released from hemoglobin in the red blood cells and moves to the parenchymal cells of each tissue by diffusion Oxygen that has diffused into cells is then utilized in the mitochondria to produce adenosine triphosphate ATP the energy currency of all cells The mitochondria are able to produce ATP until the oxygen tension or PO₂ on the cell surface falls to a critical level of about 4.5 mm Hg Thus in order to meet the energetic needs of cells it is important to maintain a continuous supply of oxygen to the mitochondria at or above the critical PO₂ In order to accomplish this desired outcome the cardiorespiratory system including the blood must be capable of regulation to ensure survival of all tissues under a wide range of circumstances The purpose of this presentation is to provide basic information about the operation and regulation of the cardiovascular and respiratory systems as well as the properties of the blood and parenchymal cells so that a fundamental understanding of the regulation of tissue oxygenation is achieved behavior and choice community wide problems like poverty unemployment poor education inadequate housing poor public transportation interpersonal violence and decaying neighborhoods also contribute to health inequities as well as the historic and ongoing interplay of structures policies and norms that shape lives When these factors are not optimal in a community it does not mean they are intractable such inequities can be mitigated by social policies that can shape health in powerful ways Communities in Action Pathways to Health Equity seeks to delineate the causes of and the solutions to health inequities in the United States This report focuses on what communities can do to promote health equity what actions are needed by the many and varied stakeholders that are part of communities or support them as well as the root causes and structural barriers that need to be overcome

From Hypertension to Heart Failure Michael Böhm, John H. Laragh, Manfred Zehender, 2012-12-06 Arterial hypertension coronary heart disease and heart failure are the commonest cardiovascular conditions to present in clinical practice Over the past few years it has become increasingly clear that they are closely and causally interrelated and that their relationship can have a significant bearing on prognosis Epidemiological studies have shown that arterial hypertension is one of the most important risk factors for developing heart failure Only one in four patients with hypertension is adequately managed and in 50% of cases the hypertension has not been recognised or treated Patients with pre-existing hypertension who go on to suffer an acute myocardial infarction have usually not previously had typical angina symptoms the infarct territory is larger life threatening arrhythmias are commoner and hence in hospital mortality and long term prognosis are markedly worse The presence of raised blood pressure in the post infarct phase doubles the risk of manifest heart failure The close relationship between hypertension coronary heart disease and heart failure makes the choice of therapeutic strategy particularly important Agents and classes of agents that have prognostic value in all three conditions should be considered first as synergy might result in additional benefits In such patients this sort of therapeutic decision making might have further advantages The use of these agents may prevent complications which are not yet clinically obvious such as heart failure
