

AP Human Geography FINAL EXAM Review

physical and human - what are the two types of geography?

physical geography - the branch of geography dealing with natural features and processes human geography - the branch of geography dealing with how human activity affects or is influenced by the Earth's surface cartography - the science or art of making maps. The "charting" of the earth distortion - what is the flaw in turning 3D maps to flat maps?

reference and thematic - what are the two types of maps?

reference map - type of map that shows locations of places and geographic features, it also shows absolute locations and is the most common type of map thematic map - type of map that tells a story about the degree of an attribute, the pattern of its distribution or its movement, it also shows relative location mental maps - maps that we carry in our minds of places we have been to and places we have heard of, can be form correctly or incorrectly based on the influence of media terra incognita - unknown land, place that we know are there but we don't know any details about them paths - movement from one place to another (roads, sidewalks, etc.)

the more frequent you travel on a path, the more you become familiar with it - what about paths?

accessibility - the idea that if you have access to another path, then you can go to more places
