Student Learning in South Asia: Challenges, Opportunities, and Policy Priorities Halil Dundar,Tara Beteille,Michelle Riboud,2014-07-07 For the past decade most South Asian countries have directed their efforts towards achieving universal access to elementary education While these investments have led to more children being retained in school they have not translated into better learning outcomes This report comprehensively analyzes the performance of South Asian educational systems in terms of student learning It attempts to answer three questions How well do education systems in South Asia perform What determines student learning outcomes What policy options are effective in improving learning outcomes especially given increasing demand and competition for public resources Because learning outcomes and skill acquisition in the region are low in both absolute and relative terms schooling does not translate as it should into better life chances including escape from poverty for many more Nor does schooling contribute to higher productivity and economic growth so that countries in the region find it difficult to accelerate economic and social development Governments in the region now fully realize that they need to direct their attention toward improving quality so that students can aspire to fuller lives as both individuals and labor market participants Merely spending time in school is not enough students need to register a significant gain in both noncognitive and cognitive skills if countries in the region are to reap full returns on their investments and generate gains in employment job creation and productivity To examine what policies hold promise for improving student learning the report reviews evidence from large scale national learning assessments and findings from impact evaluations being conducted in the region It identifies the following strategic priorities for improving learning outcomes in South Asia 1 Make learning outcomes the central goal of education policy 2 Invest in early childhood nutrition 3 Improve teacher effectiveness and accountability 4 Provide additional support to disadvantaged children in early grades 5 Use financing effectively 6 Leverage the contribution of the non state sector and 7 Build learning assessment systems Each of these policy options will need to be integrated within a larger agenda of inclusive economic growth and governance reform to be truly effective

2012 GCSE English results Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Education Committee, 2013-06-11 The 2012 GCSE English results prompted significant controversy which ultimately resulted in an application for judicial review This report sets out the background to these events and identifies lessons to be learned The problems with GCSE English can be traced back to the 2007 09 development phase of the qualification in particular the turbulence which resulted from the shift away from a mostly linear to a modular system combined with a high proportion of controlled assessment and generous marking tolerances Exam board experts raised concerns at the time but these were not acted upon by the regulator the then interim Ofqual Further difficulties arose because of pressures from the school accountability system The problems experienced with GCSE English in 2012 highlighted serious weaknesses in the moderation of speaking and listening with consequences for grade awarding The current status of Ofqual as an independent regulator accountable to Parliament is the right one However the Coalition Government is bringing in wholesale changes to GCSEs and A levels to a tight timetable and at the same time Ofqual must have systems in place The Committee is also concerned that there is a rush towards separate exam systems for England Wales and Northern Ireland without careful reflection on what might be lost or consensus that this is the right thing to do
