Review

The church was teaching the public false information, and basically just wanted to have as much money as possible, but that isn't what a church should be doing, they should be educating. Martin Luther was the 1st to notice, because he saw real priests in Rome. He was against the sale of indulgences too. John Calvin was another protestant leader who challenged papal authority, and traditional catholic theology. The catholic church launched a counter reformation in response to this. The protestant reformation began when Luther burned the papal bull document. To enforce orthodoxy in the church, both protestants and catholics began witch-hunts. People were blamed for natural events w/ supernatural causes, and these people w/ "special powers" were killed or burned at the stake. The scientific revolution challenged what people thought they already knew. Aristotle was a greek philosopher who claimed everything could be reduced to the four elements. The pythagorean theorem in geometry deduced describing physical objects w/ mystical properties. Copernicus stated that we moved in orbits + the idea of heliocentric. Galileo built a telescope, and Newton had the law of gravity. The enlightenment included advancements in science that allowed thinkers to question ideas and practices. Voltaire was one of the leading french thinkers of his time.
