Market liquidity is an essential feature of the stock market, so investors and corporates can and when it suits them. A key priority for stock market operators is to ensure there are market participants with a wide range of different perspectives, which offer plentiful trading volumes. Exchanges need to encourage investors with shorter-term horizons to lubricate the transaction; the vitality of shorter-term operators is a key part of the success of the whole. However, in the proliferation of credit has favoured speculative strategies, and along with new technologies, trading volumes have been driven up by the speed at which data is accessed and put to use. Consequently, market participants optimise their strategies for quick returns and become largely disconnected, potentially in conflict with, the wider interests of longer-term investors. This is the 'fast finance' problem. In this new chapter of Slow Finance, Gervais Williams builds on his previous work to consider the problems and solutions for today's financial markets. He suggests that the debate has focused on the computerised algorithms that instigate rapid automated buy or sell orders. Exchanges, needs to be extended further and a more forward-looking policy that brings the public markets together into one physical location to concentrate market volumes, be implemented. In his extensive industry experience Gervais Williams outlines: § Market liquidity & stock markets § Liquidity changes over recent decades, and the scope to game the system § Addressing the problem of high frequency traders § The overlooked problem – how markets fragmented geographically during the boom § Fostering true market liquidity beyond the credit boom to aid productivity growth § Peculiar bonds, associations and networks - as well as the civil, political, and institutional characteristics society in which they live - can be powerful drivers affecting the quality of life among a community's, or a nation's inhabitants and their ability to achieve both individual and societal goals. Civic engagement, social cohesion, and other dimensions of social capital affect social, economic and health outcomes for individuals and communities. Can these be measured, and can federal surveys contribute toward this end? Can this information be collected elsewhere, and if so, how should it be collected? Civic Engagement and Social Cohesion identifies measurement approaches that can lead to improved understanding of civic engagement, social cohesion, and social capital - and their potential role in explaining the functioning of society. With the needs of data users in mind, this report examines conceptual frameworks developed in the literature to determine promising measures and measurement methods for informing public policy discourse. The report identifies working definitions of key indicators; advises on the feasibility and specifications of indicators relevant to analyses of social, economic and health domains; and assesses the strength of the evidence regarding the relationship between indicators and observed trends in crime, employment, and resilience to shocks such as natural disasters. Civic Engagement and Social Cohesion weighs the relative merits of surveys, administrative records, and non-government data sources, and considers the appropriate role of the federal statistical agency. This report makes recommendations to improve the measurement of civic health through population surveys conducted by the government and identifies priority areas for research, development, and implementation. The armed forces of Europe have undergone a dramatic transformation since the collapse of the Soviet Union. The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces provides the first comprehensive analysis of national security and defence policies, strategies, doctrine, capabilities, and military operations, as well as the alliances and partnerships of European armed forces in response to the security challenges Europe has faced since the end of the cold war. This cross-European comparison of the evolution of national defence policies and armed forces represents a notable blind spot in the existing literature. The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces aims to fill this gap with fifty-one contributions on European defence and international security from around the world. The six parts focus on: country-based assessments of the evolution of national defence policies of Europe's major, medium, and lesser powers since the end of the cold war; the alliances and security partnerships developed by European states to cooperate in the promotion of national security; the security challenges faced by European states and their armed forces, ranging from interstate through intra-state and transnational; the national security strategies and doctrines developed in response to these challenges; the military capabilities, and the underlying defence and technological industrial base, brought to bear to support national strategies and doctrines; and, finally, the multinational or multilateral military operations by European armed forces. The contributions to The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces collectively demonstrate the fruitfulness of giving analytical precedence back to the comparison of national defence policies and armed forces across Europe. Today's era of intense globalization has unleashed dynamic movements of people, pathogens, and pests that overwhelm the static territorial jurisdictions on which the governance provided by sovereign states and their formal intergovernmental institutions is based. This world of movement calls for new ideas and institutions to govern public health, above all in Africa, where the movements and health challenges are the most acute. The report insightfully explores these challenges in ways that put the perspectives of Africans themselves at the center stage. It begins with the long central and still compelling African health challenge of combating the pandemic of HIV/AIDS. It then examines the global governance responses by the major multilateral organizations of the World Bank and the World Trade Organization and the newer informal flexible and democratically oriented ones of the Group of Eight. It also addresses the compounding health challenges created by climate change to assess both its intensifying impact on Africa and how all international institutions have largely failed to link climate and health in their governance response. It concludes several recommendations about the innovative ideas and institutions that offer a way to close global governance gaps and thus improving Africans' health and that of citizens beyond. Practical and accessible, this annual guide will prove indispensable when starting, running or ending a trust or dealing with a deceased estate, whilst ensuring you are complying with the law. Trusts and Estates in Scotland guides you through the complexities of Scotland's unique trust and estate regime. With examples, tax tables and practical commentaries help to illustrate the latest legislation and the key points of practice. The reader will not only fully understand current tax law, but be comfortable applying it to their clients' trusts and estates. Contents includes: Introduction; Background; Starting a trust; Running a trust: income tax; Running a trust: capital gains tax; Running a trust: inheritance tax; Running a trust: stamp duties; Charitable trusts; Ending a trust; Deceased estates: introduction; Deceased estates: Practical IHT considerations; Deceased estates: income tax and CGT; Deceased estates: post-death rearrangements; Deceased estates: stamp duties. Previous edition ISBN: 9781780430171 This book discusses the opportunities and challenges facing legal education in the era of globalization. It identifies the knowledge and skills that law students will require in order to succeed in the practice of tomorrow, and explores pedagogical shifts legal education needs to make to move outside of the classroom. With contributions from leading experts on legal education from various jurisdictions across the globe, the work combines theoretical depth with practical insights. So, to understand the changing landscape of legal education in the era of globalization, the contributors argue that law schools can, and must, adopt educational strategies that at least present students with alternative understandings of what studying and practicing law is meant to be about. They find that law schools need to offer their students choices, a vision of practice that is not driven entirely by the demands of the marketplace or the needs of major international law firms. Bridging the gap between theory and practice, this book makes a significant contribution to the impact of globalization on legal education and how students and law schools need to adapt for the future. It will be of great interest to teachers and students of comparative legal studies and legal education, as well as policy-makers and practitioners. Australian Climate Policy and Diplomacy provides a well overdue critique of existing and high-profile, publications that convey the 'greenhouse mafia' hypothesis, which posits that Australia's weak policy response to climate change is the result of a menacing domestic fossil fuel lobby. Ben L. Parr argues that the shared government-industry discourse about protecting Australia's industrial competitiveness has had a more decisive influence in shaping and legitimising Australian climate policy than the direct lobbying tactics of the fossil fuel industry. Parr also reveals how divergent foreign policy discourses and traditions of Australia's two major political parties – an internationalist versus alliance-focused – have enabled and constrained their climate diplomatic and domestic policies over time. To demonstrate his argument, he presents a discourse analysis with a chronological policy narrative, comprising more than 1000 primary texts (media releases, interviews and speeches) generated by prime ministers and key fossil fuel lobbyists. Overall, this volume provides a framework that can be adapted to examine climate mitigation policies in other countries, notably Canada and the US. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of climate change, environmental policy and governance, and Australian climate change policy and politics more specifically, as well as policymakers and practitioners working in these fields. This two-volume work unveils trends, strengths, weaknesses and overall dynamics and implications of social entrepreneurship in the Middle East region, whilst identifying both opportunities and threats facing social entrepreneurship and supplements through a wealth of insights and examples inspired from practical current applications. This collection brings together a group of highly respected law and religious scholars to explore the funding of religious heritage in the context of state support for religious importance of this state support is that on the one hand it illustrates the potential tensions between secular and religious values, whilst on the other it constitutes a relevant tool for investigating the question of the legitimacy of such financial support. The funding logically varies according to the national system of state-religion relationships and this is reflected in the range of countries studied, including: Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, France, Italy, The Netherlands, Spain, Turkey, and the United Kingdom. The book provides clarity in the assignment of funds to religious heritage, as well as how to define the limit of what relates to the exercise of worship and what belongs to cultural heritage. It is clear that the main challenge for the future lies not only in managing the dual purpose of religious monuments, but also in re-using these buildings which have lost their original purpose. This collection will appeal to those interested in cultural heritage management, as well as law and religion scholars. The presented book UPPSC (Uttarakhand Public Service Commission) General Studies (Paper-I) Preliminary Examination Solved Papers is a compilation of previous years' examination question papers: 2023-2005. Aspirants can find all the question papers easily where most of the syllabus is covered in the form of MCQs. The solutions are supplemented lucidly with analytical explanations to promote a clearer understanding to various types of questions depending upon the complexity. This book seeks to make the aspirants fully aware of the developments in the papers throughout these years along with preparing them to face the upcoming examination with confidence. Our Study Text is the only P6 text reviewed by the examiner. It covers the entire syllabus at just the right level. There is a chapter towards the end of the text devoted to career planning and ethics. This chapter helps you to bridge the gap between acquiring the knowledge you must have at this level and starting to apply that knowledge to the type of questions that you will face. The question and answer bank will also be vital in helping you develop your application skills. The questions are at a level designed to aid your transition towards the examination standard questions you will find in BPP Learning Media's Practice and Revision kit. Turkey's candidacy for membership of the European Union has had mixed effects on its public policies. The initial degree of cohesion between EU and Turkish national policies, practices and institutions has varied by the policy field in question, leading to a complex amalgam of fit and misfit between the two actors. Their interaction in different policy areas has had direct influence both on Turkey's accession to the EU and its own national development process. With accession negotiations stalled and Turkey's relationship with the EU increasingly precarious, it is vital to take stock of the extent to which Turkey and the EU are aligned in key areas. The Europeanization of Turkish Public Policies: A Scorecard is the first comprehensive work focusing on the impact of the EU accession process upon Turkey's public policies between 1999 and 2005. Complementing the authors' earlier volume Europeanization of Turkey: Polity and Politics, it brings together leading specialists to provide key analyses of the impact of Europeanization on specific areas of Turkey's public policy. Each chapter applies a core analytical framework to examine a separate policy field, resulting in a consistent and comprehensive volume on Turkey-EU relations. With its clear and focused structure and extensive coverage, concluding with a scorecard enabling informed assessment of the impact of Europeanization on Turkey's public policy areas, this book provides a one-stop resource for scholars and students alike. A timely and informed assessment of the dynamics and outcomes of the Europeanization of an EU candidate country's major public policy areas, this book represents an essential resource for those interested in EU-Turkey relations, the effects of Europeanization on Turkey and Turkish politics. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of International Studies. Russian businesses in the post-Soviet period have been noted for their unusual, some allegedly corrupt, business practices, and for their role in the enrichment of oligarchs. This book includes a wide range of case study examples, and which draws on the author's first-hand experience running a Russian company, argues that a key to understanding contemporary Russian business is the importance of arbitrage, that is the ability to take advantage of price and cost differentials in different markets. The book argues that the conditions for such arbitrage advantages are often created by businesses which have special links to particular institutions; that arbitrage benefits are not available to all businesses in a sector, thereby providing unfair competitive advantages to some businesses; and that businesses' overall activities are often distorted by this system. The book includes an analysis of a range of different types of arbitrage activities in action. Research on the family has expanded considerably across Asia but studies tend to be fragmented, focusing on narrow issues within specific areas (cities, towns, small communities) and may not be accessible to international readers. These limitations make it difficult for researchers, students, policy makers, and practitioners to obtain the information they need. The Routledge Handbook of Families in Asia fills that gap by providing a detailed and comprehensive analysis of Asian families by a wide range of experts in a single publication. The thirty-two chapters of this comparative and multi-disciplinary volume are organized into nine thematic areas: conceptual approaches, methodological issues, family life in the context of culture, family relationships across the family life cycle, issues of work and income, stress and conflict, family policy and laws, and environmental setting of homes. Each chapter examines family life in a range of Asian countries, studying cultural similarities and differences and exploring how families are changing and what trends are likely to develop in the future. To provide a fruitful learning experience for the reader, each chapter offers examples, relevant data, and a comprehensive list of references. Covering a complete interdisciplinary overview of families in Asia, the Handbook will be of interest to students, academics, policy makers and practitioners across the disciplines of Asian Studies, Sociology, Demography, Social Work, Law, Social Policy, Anthropology, Geography, Public Health and Architecture. This book brings together Indian and European perspectives on India's polity, economy and international strategy. It explores internal, regional and global determinants shaping India's current position and goals in the early 21st century. Through an array of methodological and theoretical approaches, it presents debates on democracy, economic development, foreign and security policy, and the course of India-European Union relations. The volume will prove invaluable to scholars and students of international relations, politics, economics, history, and development studies, as well as to policy makers and economists. Michael Moss on Archives brings together selected outputs from an internationally renowned archival scholar, who explored the theory and practice of archives and records management. Comprising a selection of 11 of Moss' most significant archival writings, the book demonstrates the development of his thinking in archival theory and practice over the past 20 years. Michael Moss was a towering figure in modern archival writing and was able to push the boundaries of the discipline, notably with his analysis of how modern governments create records and his speculation about the future of the archive in the digital world. Bringing together in one place Moss' most significant writings, alongside a comprehensive bibliography, this book documents a significant contribution to British and international archival theory and practice. Each essay is preceded by a critical introduction, written by a leading archival scholar, assessing the piece and setting it in its archival or historical context, while an overall introduction by the editors provides biographical information and describes the development of Michael's archival thinking. Michael Moss on Archives will be of interest to scholars and students engaged in the study of archival science, library and information science, history, digital humanities, and media studies. It should also be of interest to professionals who work in archives and records management. Designed by Atlanta architect A. Bradbury and opened in 1968, the mansion has been home to eight first families and houses a distinguished collection of American art and antiques. Often called "the people's house," the mansion is always on display, always serving the public. Memories of the Mansion tells the story of the Governor's Mansion—what preceded it and how it came to be as well as the stories of the people who have lived and worked here since its opening in 1968. The authors worked closely with the families (Maddox, Carter, Busbee, Harris, Miller, Barnes, Perdue, and Deal) to capture behind-the-scenes anecdotes of what life was like in the state's most public house. This richly illustrated book not only documents this extraordinary place and the people who have lived and worked here, but also helps ensure the preservation of this historic resource so that it may continue to serve the state's people.

The mainstream agri-food system in Thailand has been shaped to aid capital accumulation by domestic and transnational hegemonic forces, and is currently sustained through hegemonic agricultural production-distribution, governance structures and ideational order. However, sustainable agricultural and land reform movements have to certain extents managed to offer alternatives. This book uses a neo-Marxist and Gramscian approach to studying the political economy of the agricultural and agri-food system in Thailand (1990-2014). The author argues that hegemonic forces have many measures to co-opt dissent into hegemonic structures, and that counter-hegemony should be seen as an ongoing process over a long period of time where predominantly counter-hegemonic forces, constrained by political and economic structural conditions, may at times retain some hegemonic elements. Contrary to what academic studies suggest, the author argues that localist-inspired social movements in Thailand are not insular and anti-globalisation. Instead, they are selective in fostering collaborations and global networks based on values such as sustainability, fairness and partnership. Providing new perspectives on polarised politics in Thailand, particularly how cross-class alliances can further or frustrate counter-hegemonic movements, the book points to the importance of analysing social movements in relation to established political authority. It will be of interest to academics in the field of Politics and International Relations, Sociology, Development Studies and Asian Studies.

Tourism is acclaimed to be one of the world's biggest revenue generating industries accounting for billions of dollars and thousands of jobs. Technological innovations, urbanization, improvement in living standard, introduction of fuel efficient cars made journeys relatively easier. All these factors have generated a vibrant tourism activity which has brought a bloom in domestic tourism. The tourism sector is having multiplier effect on the economy as its contribution to the GDP is one of the highest and its ability to generate employment is much higher than any other sector. It is the largest single employer and industry in several island nations. The World Travel & Tourism Council calculated that tourism generated at an average annual rate of 7.9% from 2013 to 2023. This gives India the third rank among countries with the fastest growing tourism industries over the next decade. India's rich history and its cultural and geographical diversity has made its international tourism appeal large and diverse. It presents heritage and cultural tourism along with medical, business, educational and sports tourism. Water is an attractive element and plays an important role in recreation and holidays. Rivers, Lakes, Waterfalls have an aesthetic significance and are attracting tourists. Today, there are a number of established lake tourism destinations all over the world. Water tourism assumes significance in the national economies of several European and Asian countries. There are several water based tourism destinations in the world which are very popular and drawing large number of both domestic and international tourists across the world. In India several Rivers, Tanks, Lakes and Waterfalls etc., All these water bodies are sources of life for flora and fauna. All the important cities in India have been developed on the banks of the Rivers and Lakes from times. These water bodies provided irrigation facilities and became great centers of civilization. These centers are also popular as pilgrimage canters, since ancient times and are all also emerging as new destinations in modern times. The author has tried to make harmonious blend of theory and practice which hopefully will make the book more useful to the students, teachers and practicing tour professionals. The author would appreciate constructive comments and suggestions from the teachers, practicing tour planners and executives in the improvements of this book. On 1 August 2008, the Chinese Anti-Monopoly Law entered into force, introducing a comprehensive framework for competition law to the Chinese market. One set of the new rules pertains to merger control. The Ministry of Commerce (MOFCOM) was nominated as the authority responsible for enforcing merger control in China and has been actively doing so ever since. Recent years have established China as one of the most important merger filing jurisdictions for cross-border mergers alongside the EU and the US. This work evaluates the Chinese merger control law regime and MOFCOM's decision-making process after more than five years of application. In particular, it assesses which policy goals (competition policy goals or industrial policy considerations) prevail in the written law and its application and provides suggestions for a further improvement of the law – with the aim to develop a transparent merger control regime that promotes long-term economic growth in China. Do you feel that humanity is in crisis? We have all the tools to create a healthy, harmonious society. Advances in science, technology, management, human rights, and democratic governance have ushered in an era of unprecedented accomplishment and prosperity. They have given us the means to greatly reduce suffering from disease, poverty, and conflict. At the same time, the ideas and social covenant brought us to this point seem unable to meet the challenges of our overpopulated, globalised world. Signs of dysfunction are all around us: racial, ethnic, and religious hatred seems to be on the rise; the natural environment is degrading rapidly; violence and mass migrations threaten stability everywhere; and the gap between rich and poor only grows larger. Meanwhile, our vaunted democratic ideal has in full retreat, unable to withstand the rise of divisive leaders and quasi-totalitarian governments. Our hard-won human rights and civil freedoms are being subverted by technologies and regimes that seek to control all human expression. And in much of the world loneliness, depression, drug abuse, and a profound sense of loss of purpose have become pervasive. How did we get here? The Next Enlightenment argues that most of humanity's problems are the result of a limited level of consciousness – an underdeveloped capacity for self-awareness that encourages utilitarian, self-serving behaviour while curbing our higher faculties. From this understanding it presents a compelling vision of an alternative future based on the development of consciousness. It is both a political manifesto and a practical manual on how to create social conditions that will allow each of us to achieve our purpose and script a new future for humanity. The Interlaw book on Renewable Energy is a comprehensive overview of renewable energy policies and developments in the major countries in the field. It addresses, in a practical and legal perspective, the main interrogations encountered by investors and policy makers on how to efficiently deploy renewable energy, particularly in terms of support schemes, grid connection costs, priority and congestion rules or permitting. Consumption Trends provides information on Value Added Taxes/Goods and Services Taxes (VAT/GST) and excise duty rates in OECD member countries. It also contains information about international aspects of VAT/GST developments and the efficiency of this tax. It describes a range of other consumption tax provisions on tobacco, alcoholic beverages, motor vehicles and aviation fuels. Should the European Neighbourhood Policy stop at the borders of the European Union's immediate neighbouring countries? This book is the first full length study of the 'neighbours of the EU's neighbours', a concept originally introduced by the European Commission with reference to South Africa, the Middle East and Central Asia. These regions in the EU's broader neighbourhood are perceived as an 'arc of crisis' from which manifold challenges emanate for Europe. This timely takes stock of the state of the EU's cooperation with the neighbours of its neighbours and the concept might help promote security, stability and prosperity beyond the countries which formally part of the European Neighbourhood Policy. How can the EU create bridges between regions? What instruments does the EU have at its disposal and how can it link them in order to the challenges and overcome the current fragmentation? One of the conclusions is the suggestion to consider a pragmatic 'EU Strategy for the Neighbours of its Neighbours' which addresses the the broader EU neighbourhood in a more systematic and consistent manner and helps transform in the long run the 'arc of crisis' into another 'ring of friends'.

In the world of law enforcement art and antiquity crime has in the past usually assumed a place of low interest and priority. That situation now slowly begun to change on both the local and international level as criminals, encouraged by the record sums now being paid for art treasures, are now seeking to exploit the art market systematically by means of theft, fraud and looting. In this collection academics and practitioners from Australasia, Europe and North America combine to examine the challenges presented to the criminal justice system by these developments. Best practice methods of detecting, investigating, preventing such crimes are explored. This book will be of interest and use to academics and practitioners alike in the areas of law, crime and justice.

Corporate governance in financial institutions has come under the spotlight since the banking crisis in the UK in 2008-9. In many respects, business raises unique problems for corporate governance that are not found in other corporations. With the rise of the knowledge for development paradigm, expert advice has become a prime component of foreign aid. At the same time, it has been object of repeated criticism: the chronic failure of assistance a notion under which advice is commonly subsumed has been documented in a host of studies. Nonetheless, international organisations continue to send advisors, promising to increase effectiveness of expert support if their technocratic recommendations are taken up. This book examines fundamental problems of expert advice in the context of aid that concern issues of power and influence rather than merely flaws of implementation. Based on empirical evidence from South Africa and Tanzania, the authors show that aid-related advisory processes are inevitably obstructed by conflicting interests, political pressures and hierarchical relations that impede knowledge transfer and mutual learning. As a result, recipient governments find themselves caught in a perpetual cycle of dependence continuously advised by experts who convey the shifting paradigms and agendas of their respective donor governments. For young democracies, the persistent presence of external actors is hazardous; ultimately, it poses a threat to the legitimacy of their governments if their policy-making becomes responsive to foreign demands than to the preferences and needs of their citizens.
