Vertical Integration in Cable Television David Waterman, Andrew Weiss, 1997 Vertical ownership ties between cable television programming suppliers such as CNN HBO and the Discovery Channel and multiple cable television system operators such as Time Warner and TCI have become extensive Many claim that such ownership ties reduce programming diversity restrict entry of competitors to cable such as local telephone exchange carriers or direct broadcast satellites or have other socially undesirable effects David Waterman and Andrew A Weiss address those and related issues from an economic perspective On the basis of that analysis they conclude that to the extent there are economic or other social problems with the cable television industry s performance policy solutions to those problems lie not with regulatory or other constraints on vertical ownership but with reducing the horizontal market power of the multiple cable television system operators In a postscript the authors evaluate the Federal Trade Commission s approval of the Time Warner Turner Broadcasting merger
