The How the News Feels: The Empathic Power of Literary Journalists Jonathan D. Fitzgerald, 2023-07-28 Literary journalism's origins can be traced to the nineteenth century when it developed alongside the era's sentimental literature. Combining fact-based reporting with the sentimentality of popular fiction, literary journalism encouraged readers to empathize with subjects by presenting more nuanced and engaging stories than typical news coverage. While women writers were central to the formation and ongoing significance of the genre, literary journalism scholarship has largely ignored their contributions. How the News Feels re-centers the work of a range of writers who were active from the nineteenth century until today, including Catharine Williams, Margaret Fuller, Nellie Bly, Winifred Black, Zora Neale Hurston, Joan Didion, Adrian Nicole LeBlanc, and Alexis Okeowo. Offering intimate access to their subjects' thoughts, motivations, and yearnings, these journalists encouraged readers to empathize with society's outcasts, from asylum inmates and murder suspects to fallen women and the working poor. As this carefully researched study shows, these writers succeeded in defining and developing the genre of literary journalism with stories that inspire action, engender empathy, and narrow the gap between writer, subject, and audience.

Novaja žurnalistika i antologija novoj žurnalistiki Tom Wolfe, 1990 This is a 1973 anthology of journalism edited by Tom Wolfe and E. W. Johnson. The book is both a manifesto for a new type of journalism by Wolfe and a collection of examples of New Journalism by American writers covering a variety of subjects from the frivolous baton twirling competitions to the deadly serious the Vietnam War. The pieces are notable because they do not conform to the standard dispassionate and even-handed model of journalism. Rather, they incorporate literary devices usually only found in fictional works.

The Rise of Literary Journalism in the Eighteenth Century Iona Italia, 2005 This book provides an account of the early periodical as a literary genre. Tracing the development of journalism from the 1690s to the 1760s, it covers a range of publications by well-known writers and obscure hacks.

Global Literary Journalism, 2012

Journalism Ian Hargreaves, 2014 Journalism entered the twenty-first century caught in a paradox. The world had more journalism across a wider range of media than at any time since the birth of the western free press in the eighteenth century. Western journalists had found themselves under a cloud of suspicion from politicians, philosophers, the general public, anti-globalization radicals, religious groups, and even from fellow journalists. Critics argued that the news industry had lost its moral bearings, focusing on high investment returns rather than reporting and analysing the political, economic, and social issues of the day. Journalism has a central and profound impact on our worldview; we find it everywhere, from newspapers and television to radio and the Internet. In the new edition of this thought-provoking and provocative Very Short Introduction, Ian Hargreaves examines the world of contemporary journalism. By looking not only at what journalism has been in the past but also what it is becoming in the digital age, he examines the big issues relating to reportage, warfare, celebrity culture, privacy, and technology worldwide.
