The Constitution of the Criminal Law R. A. Duff, Lindsay Farmer, S. E. Marshall, Massimo Renzo, Victor Tadros, 2013-01-31 The third book in the Criminalization series examines the constitutionalization of criminal law It considers how the criminal law is constituted through the political processes of the state how the agents of the criminal law can be answerable to it themselves and finally how the criminal law can be constituted as part of the international order Addressing the ways in which and the grounds on which types of conduct can be justifiably criminalized the first four chapters of this volume focus on the questions that arise from a consideration of the political constitution of the criminal law The contributors then turn their attention to the role of the state its institutions and officials and their role not only as creators enactors interpreters and enforcers of the criminal law but also as subjects of it How can the agents of the criminal law also be answerable to it Finally discussion turns to how the criminal law can be constituted as part of an international order Examining the relationships between domestic laws of different nation states and between domestic criminal law and international or transnational law the chapters also look at the authority and jurisdiction of international criminal law itself and its relationship to other dimensions of the international order A vital examination of one of the most important topics in modern criminal legal theory this volume raises new questions central to the study of the criminal law and offers new suggestions for addressing them

Overcriminalization Douglas Husak, 2008-01-08 The United States today suffers from too much criminal law and too much punishment Husak describes the phenomena in some detail and explores their relation and why these trends produce massive injustice His primary goal is to defend a set of constraints that limit the authority of states to enact and enforce penal offenses The book urges the weight and relevance of this topic in the real world and notes that most Anglo American legal philosophers have neglected it Husak s secondary goal is to situate this endeavor in criminal theory as traditionally construed He argues that many of the resources to reduce the size and scope of the criminal law can be derived from within the criminal law itself even though these resources have not been used explicitly for this purpose Additional constraints emerge from a political view about the conditions under which important rights such as the right implicated by punishment may be infringed When conjoined these constraints produce what Husak calls a minimalist theory of criminal liability Husak applies these constraints to a handful of examples most notably to the justifiability of drug proscriptions
