Developing the curriculum in response to these new opportunities has presented challenges, both for us and our partners, although some very informed educators have made their own personal contributions, through their experience and encouraged practice by some others at the highest levels.

These statements demonstrate the state's concern "to ensure that no one goes without appropriate treatment." Likewise, in the performance standards, the state emphasizes the need for physicians to "provide the highest quality of medical care possible." Patients' interests are protected by the requirement that physicians "not practice in a manner which fails to reflect the highest level of professional competence."

Reproductive biology research focusing attention on individual, pair and colony level interactions of the most abundant benthic amphipod species. This, including, diet and other key factors to reproductive biology. Monitoring studies concern in particular at intertidal zone sites. Finally,
