Business Ethics Essay Example Essay

Business ethics refers to a cord of professional conduct in a business that is acceptable and the conduct that examines the principles and the moral behavior in the carrying out of the business activities. The business ethics is meant to ensure that the business relates well to its environments and all the individuals that surround and are involved in it. These principles are also referred to as corporate ethics. They are generally meant for the well-doing of the business by ensuring that the company offers all the services to all clients in the most appropriate way. This is important for the reputation of the business and helps in attracting and maintaining the customers. This is so since if the status of the company is well portrayed in the industry then, it will win the interest of many and hence be able to command a good portion of the market. This also comes with an increase in the profit margins as a result of increased sales volume. Ethics is therefore very important and crucial for a business that is going to excel and prosper. The ethics apply to all the business aspects ranging from the small to large and from local to global companies that are either owned by individuals group of people or by the states. The ethical principles remain applicable to all, the organizations and require them to conduct themselves relevantly in the entire industry. The ethical issues and values are translated into large standards and rules that can be summarized I the following principles;

Integrity

This is a moral behavior that is supposed to be practiced by both the individuals and the whole organization. It should be demonstrated at all times by having the individuals involved doing what they know, and trust is right without compromising even if there is an opposing pressure towards such decisions. Once the business has made the decisions through its panel leaders, it should have them implemented whatever the case. The integrity will also allow the company to make an elaborate decision that caters and considers the wellbeing of all that are involved in the business beginning from the suppliers to the consumers. Integrity will enable the industry to uphold its honor and uprightness and not to sacrifice its principles for mere expediency or to behave hypocritically. This will ensure that there are no improper activities carried out by the organization.

Honesty

The business must operate most truthfully and act transparently to win the trust of the market and even its suppliers. The business environment at large needs straightforwardness for it to relate well, with the people. This honesty is needed from the top management down to the market where the ultimate activities are rendered by making sales to the final consumers. This can be practiced to avoid the discrimination of the customers in any way. It will, therefore, ensure that the customers are given the best quality and desirable quantity products and having them not given a default or deceiving advertisements or offered useful products. Honesty will, therefore, help the business to keep to the right morals and avoid misleading the people in the market by misrepresenting itself in the market or by giving overstatements, giving partial truth or by omitting some information that should be spoken into the ears of the public.
