The Sources of Innovation Eric von Hippel, 1988 It has long been assumed that new product innovations are typically developed by product manufacturers an assumption that has inevitably had a major impact on innovation related research and activities ranging from how firms organize their research and development to how governments measure innovation In this synthesis of his seminal research von Hippel challenges that basic assumption and demonstrates that innovation occurs in different places in different industries Presenting a series of studies showing that end users material suppliers and others are the typical sources of innovation in some fields von Hippel explores why this variation in the functional sources of innovation occurs and how it might be predicted He also proposes and tests some implications of replacing a manufacturer as innovator assumption with a view of the innovation process as predictably distributed across users manufacturers and suppliers Innovation he argues will take place where there is greatest economic benefit to the innovator
