The CARBON CYCLE CLOZE Reading Key

Decomposers Carbon dioxide Carbon cycle Burning of fossil fuels (2) Atmospheric CO₂

Cellular respiration (2) Decomposition (2) Formation of fossil fuels Industrial CO₂

Did you know that living things need carbon for survival? Some of us need it because of the energy compounds it makes up while others need it for complex biochemical reactions. Because the earth has only a fixed amount of carbon, it is important that it gets recycled through the carbon cycle. Plants are an essential part of the carbon cycle because of their ability to carry out the process of photosynthesis. Using the sun's energy, plants are able to take in carbon dioxide that was formed from the burning of fossil fuels and cellular respiration, and convert it into sugars and oxygen. On the other hand, heterotrophs cannot. Instead, they must eat plants or other animals, breaking down sugars and starches through metabolism which results in energy, water, and carbon dioxide molecules in the atmosphere where the plants are able to use it again. Decomposers are then responsible for taking waste and dead matter and returning it to the soil. Along with the ocean's uptake of carbon dioxide and decomposition, carbon is then returned to the soil where it becomes a fossil fuel again.
