UNESCO developed the ICT Competency Framework for Teachers (ICT CFT) as a tool to guide pre and in service teacher training on the use of ICTs across the education system. The ICT CFT is intended to be adapted to support national and institutional goals by providing an up-to-date framework for policy development and capacity building in this dynamic area. The ICT Competency Framework for Teachers (ICT CFT) Version 3 is a response to recent technological and pedagogical developments in the field of ICT and Education, and incorporates in its structure inclusive principles of non-discrimination, open and equitable information accessibility and gender equality in the delivery of education supported by technology. It addresses the impacts of recent technological advances on education and learning, such as Artificial Intelligence (AI), Mobile Technologies, the Internet of Things and Open Educational Resources, to support the creation of inclusive Knowledge Societies. [Publisher summary, ed] As pedagogical leaders, principals and vice-principals must necessarily prioritize teacher supervision. Whether used individually or with a group, this effective approach centers on improving educational services for students and optimizing their academic achievement. However, teacher supervision is influenced by ambiguities and several types of challenges related to the concept of supervision, the actors' perceptions and beliefs, and the various systemic structures at play. This competency standards framework presents the knowledge, the know how to do, the know how to be, and the know how to become every successful teacher supervisor should possess, and proposes for each order a summary of existing literature and accessible theories. This competence reference manual will help supervisors acquire invaluable pedagogical and relational skills to perform high-quality, high-results supervision. This edition is not just a rehash of old, albeit classic and still important, stuff. Instead, it provides a fresh perspective on a topic of perennial interest for those working in the field that has been variously called training and development, human resource development, performance technology, and workplace learning and performance. The fresh perspective takes into consideration two additional instructor settings to the traditional face-to-face environments that most instructors and trainers know -- that is, online and blended settings. These settings are, of course, becoming more critical as instruction moves beyond classroom settings to include virtual and combinations of classroom and other media delivery methods. The ibstpi instructor competencies match up well to Mapping the Future (Bernthal, Colterahn, Davis, Naughton, Rothwell, & Wellins 2004), the current ASTD competency study of the field now known as Workplace Learning and Performance (WLP) and previously known as Training and Development (T&D). WLP is more than a new name for an old subject and represents a fundamental paradigm shift in what it means to be a professional in the field formerly known as training. WLP is all about getting improved performance -- and therefore improved results -- in organizational settings through planned and unplanned learning interventions. Instruction is thus a means to an end and not an end in itself. The ibstpi instructor competencies dovetail well with that philosophy. This booklet, which has been designed for a diverse audience, including work team members, supervisors/managers, trade union members, employers, trainers, teachers/lecturers, human resource managers, and students/trainees, presents basic information about the purpose, content, and quality of competency standards for vocational education within the framework of South Australia's vocational education and training system. Discussed first are fundamental ideas underlying the concepts of competency and competency-based training. South Australia's national framework for competency standards is examined. The remaining four sections explain the following: who is involved in developing competency standards, how they are developed, what they look like, what types of standards are developed, and how they can be judged. Appended are the following: a list of abbreviations, Australian Standard Framework descriptors, guidelines for becoming a competency standards body, a list of 45 competency standards bodies endorsed by the National Training Board (NTB), a 13-item annotated bibliography of publications about data gathering techniques, a list of the NTB-endorsed competency standards as of October 1994, and a 27-item annotated bibliography of useful references concerning competency standards. (MN) This comprehensive five-step model for measuring teacher knowledge and skills helps teacher educators and school administrators prepare fair, valid, and reliable assessments of teacher performance. The Global Competency Standards sets the benchmark for the health workforce in providing equality of care to refugees and migrants. Refugee and migrant populations are highly diverse, with significant variation in life experiences, health needs and access to health care. The standards described outline expected behaviours of health workers in delivering quality care to refugees and migrants and can be used to inform the outcomes of education programmes aligned with standards for care. The standards described are designed to provide a foundation to support the development of competency-based curricula tailored to the local context and for health workers to achieve a minimum level of competence. The importance of person-centred, culturally responsive care is emphasized in the nine competency standards, which recognize the need for health workers to be trained, supported and empowered within strong health systems. These standards were developed in consultation with recognized experts in refugee and migrant health, including representatives from leading universities, international organizations and global networks. The primary focus of the framework is for application in informing education programmes to prepare all health workers in particularly those in priority countries, for providing refugee- and migrant-sensitive health services. Competencies are a cluster of behaviors and abilities—such as interpersonal, leadership, and business management skills—that define effective performance in a role. In times of disruption, such as the COVID-19 pandemic, companies may be forced to quickly shift their business strategies. Competencies and a leadership competency framework are critical components for how companies can accelerate the shift in their talent strategy. In this issue of TD at Work, Michael Ganeles and Joe Sillner outline the reasons a competency framework is important. Further, they:

- Explain why organizations need to regularly evaluate competencies.
- Provide talent questions that a competency framework addresses.
- Present examples of competencies in action.
- Discuss six competencies required for the future.

Evaluator Competencies, based on research conducted by the International Board of Standards for Training, Performance, and Instruction (ibsti™) identifies the competencies needed by those undertaking evaluation efforts in organizational settings. Classified into domains, these evaluator competencies have been rigorously validated, and are accompanied by practical descriptions in the form of performance statements associated with each competency. The authors discuss the challenges and obstacles in conducting such evaluations within dynamic, changing organizations, and provide methods and strategies for putting these competencies to use.
