How Animals Grieve Barbara J. King, 2013-03-28 A touching and provocative exploration of the latest research on animal minds and animal emotions from the renowned anthropologist and author The Washington Post Scientists have long cautioned against anthropomorphizing animals arguing that it limits our ability to truly comprehend the lives of other creatures Recently however things have begun to shift in the other direction and anthropologist Barbara J King is at the forefront of that movement arguing strenuously that we can and should attend to animal emotions With How Animals Grieve she draws our attention to the specific case of grief and relates story after story from fieldsites farms homes and more of animals mourning lost companions mates or friends King tells of elephants surrounding their matriarch as she weakens and dies and in the following days attending to her corpse as if holding a vigil A housecat loses her sister from whom she has never before been parted and spends weeks pacing the apartment wailing plaintively A baboon loses her daughter to a predator and sinks into grief In each case King uses her anthropological training to interpret and try to explain what we see to help us understand this animal grief properly as something neither the same as nor wholly different from the human experience of loss The resulting book is both daring and down to earth strikingly ambitious even as it is careful to acknowledge the limits of our understanding Through the moving stories she chronicles and analyzes so beautifully King brings us closer to the animals with whom we share a planet and helps us see our own experiences attachments and emotions as part of a larger web of life death love and loss

Mourning the Dreams Claudia Malacrida,2016-09-17 Mourning the Dreams is an accessible and moving account of parents experiences of grief and recovery after losing an infant during pregnancy childbirth or within the first month of life Drawing from the sociology of emotions health research and psychology her own experience and a range of qualitative methods Claudia Malacrida finds that bereaved parents not only grieve their child and its unrealized potential but often find their personal experiences are at odds with social forces and prevailing assumptions about the nature of their loss and how they should react to it She explores the meanings parents create as they face denial silence and other reactions from friends family communities coworkers the medical community and even within spousal relationships She also describes the courage and creativity of parents who create and negotiate meanings that help them grieve recover and manage relationships

Bereavement Institute of Medicine,Committee for the Study of Health Consequences of the Stress of Bereavement,1984-02-01 The book is well organized well detailed and well referenced it is an invaluable sourcebook for researchers and clinicians working in the area of bereavement For those with limited knowledge about bereavement this volume provides an excellent introduction to the field and should be of use to students as well as to professionals states Contemporary Psychology The Lancet comments that this book makes good and compelling reading It was mandated to address three questions what is known about the health consequences of bereavement what further research would be important and promising and whether there are preventive interventions that should either be widely adopted or further tested to evaluate their efficacy The writers have fulfilled this mandate well
