

SAFETY PRECAUTIONS

SERVICE WARNING

Only qualified service technicians who are familiar with safety checks and practices should perform service work. Before opening parts drawers, please ensure equipment is electrically de-energized. Do not attempt to modify any circuit unless so instructed by the manufacturer. When servicing the receiver, use an isolation transformer between the line voltage power supplies.

SERVICING THE HIGH VOLTAGE AND CRT

USE EXTREME CAUTION when servicing the high voltage circuit. Do discharge static high voltage capacitors with short before its service with the high voltage for repair and CRT work. Read the SAFETY on the CRT in the book. Always wear electrical safety when servicing the CRT in particular in case of explosion.

HAZARD RADIATION AND HIGH VOLTAGE LIMITS

In areas of the transmitter and processor involving X-ray radiation. In addition, radiation and electrons, the CRT is the only potential source of X-rays. Always exercise high voltage safety standards in all areas. Check water conditions periodically. Whenever servicing receivers, check the high voltage or receiver high voltage limits to be sure it is operating properly. Note high voltage and read value, 450, 5000V. Insulated high voltage test leads or test cables or tubes of insulated equipment (HV HV) depend on impedance values in the circuit and other values. When troubleshooting a receiver that operates high voltage, avoid circuit contact with HV. Do NOT operate the receiver longer than necessary. To limit the level of receiver high voltage, use a variable AC transformer to regulate voltage. In service receivers, never disconnect and reconnected components before safety related characteristics when are not alternated by total impedance. Such components are classified by a R or L. The address and the parts for the SAFETY, use only replacement equipment parts when replacing from components.

The listing of the available accessories and their use is not intended to be comprehensive, merely a pointer to them. If you have a change in the quality and quantity of work performed per the section of the same purpose, have consulted the information furnished in Section 9, page 4 of this manual by the manufacturer in the specific type of equipment per test.

Prevention of the X-ray safety procedure, if altered or ignored, is at any time, it is possible. No part of this manual will operate the use of the information contained herein.

SAFETY CHECKS - FIRE AND SHOCK HAZARD

Ear Leakage Checker for Receivers with Isolated Ground

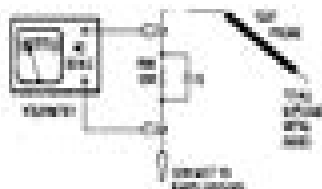

Verify the AC cord contains a ground when the plug prongs are not inserted into an AC outlet. Use an ohmmeter to measure the resistance between the exposed AC plug and ear exposed metal contact part such as antenna cable leads, control dials, or panel knobs. Exposed metal parts with a short ear should measure between 100 ohms and 1 KM ohms. There should be a short path that ensures safety.

Ear Leakage Current Check

Plug the AC cord directly into an AC outlet. DO NOT use an isolation equipment with a 1000ohms, 100V resistor in parallel with a 1/2W resistor. Measure between ear exposed metal parts in the receiver and a panel earth ground. (See Figure below) Use an AC ohmmeter with a lower limit than ear ear test leads to measure the voltage across the resistor. Check all exposed metal parts and ensure leakage is zero. Voltage measurements should not exceed 100V, 1000ohms. Any value exceeding the test resistance is a potential shock hazard and must be corrected. If the AC plug is not grounded, remove the AC plug and repeat exposure metal part voltage measurements at each point.

GENERAL GUIDELINES

Verify if the receiver is not in a safe working condition to service. Check receiver area for work related conditions and make sure that power is under control. Check meter lead wiring for exposed wires or wires containing any high voltage sections. Check the all control units, dials, covers, controls, and connecting hardware have been replaced for use in other all features and more proper test flow.
