A framework for research-based learning design

The mind, body & environment work together as we think and learn

How can students use their bodies while learning?

How can students use a new skill to achieve a goal?

How can learning be grounded in cultural experience?

How can students draw on diverse resources as they learn?

Cognition is grounded in our senses and concrete physical experience.

Cognition is for goal-directed action in the real world.

Cognition is woven into culture. Learning has a social context.

Cognitive systems include tools, devices and the people around us.
