COTS-Based Software Systems John Dean, Andree Gravel, 2003-06-30

Modern software systems increasingly use commercial off the shelf COTS software products as building blocks. In some cases major software systems are assembled with virtually no custom code in the system. The use of COTS software products as components offers the promise of rapid delivery to end users, shared development costs with other customers, and an opportunity for expanding mission or business capabilities and performance as improvements are made in the commercial marketplace. Few organizations today can afford the resources and time to replicate market tested capabilities. Yet the promise of COTS products is too often not realized in practice. There have been more failures than successes in using COTS software products. The research and software practitioner communities have been working with COTS based software systems for a number of years. There is now sufficient documented experience in the community to collect, analyze, and disseminate success stories, common failings, lessons learned, and research advances. The mounting experience shows that the effective use of COTS software products in major software systems demands new skills, knowledge, and abilities, changed roles and responsibilities, and different techniques and processes. The International Conference on COTS Based Software Systems (ICCBSS) focuses on the challenges of building and maintaining systems that incorporate COTS software products. The conference sponsors the National Research Council of Canada, the Software Engineering Institute, and the University of Southern California Center for Software Engineering, aim to bring together managers, developers, maintainers, and researchers to share their expertise and experience.

Data Access and Storage Management for Embedded Programmable Processors Francky Catthoor, K. Danckaert, K.K. Kulkarni, E. Brockmeyer, Per Gunnar Kjeldsberg, T. van Achteren, Thierry Omnes, 2013-03-14 Data Access and Storage Management for Embedded Programmable Processors gives an overview of the state of the art in system level data access and storage management for embedded programmable processors The targeted application domain covers complex embedded real time multi media and communication applications Many of these applications are data dominated in the sense that their cost related aspects namely power consumption and footprint are heavily influenced if not dominated by the data access and storage aspects The material is mainly based on research at IMEC in this area in the period 1996-2001 In order to deal with the stringent timing requirements and the data dominated characteristics of this domain we have adopted a target architecture style that is compatible with modern embedded processors and we have developed a systematic step wise methodology to make the exploration and optimization of such applications feasible in a source to source precompilation approach

High Performance Data Transfer for Distributed Data Intensive Sciences, 2017 We report on the development of ZX software providing high performance data transfer and encryption The design scales in computation power network interfaces and IOPS while carefully balancing the available resources Two U.S. patent pending algorithms help tackle data sets containing lots of small files and very large files and provide insensitivity to network latency It has a cluster oriented architecture using peer to peer technologies to ease deployment operation usage and resource discovery Its unique optimizations enable effective use of flash memory Using a pair of existing data transfer nodes at SLAC and NERSC we compared its performance to that of bcbp and GridFTP and determined that they were comparable With a proof of concept created using two four node clusters with multiple distributed multi core CPUs network interfaces and flash memory we achieved 155Gbps memory to memory over a 2x100Gbps link aggregated channel and 70Gbps file to file with encryption over a 5000 mile 100Gbps link
