relative to a potentially large number of skill domains Most diagnostic models provide a binary mastery non mastery classification for each of the assumed test taker attributes representing these skill domains Attribute profiles can be used for formative decisions as well as for summative purposes for example in a multiple cut off procedure that requires mastery on at least a certain subset of skills The number of DCMs discussed in the literature and applied to a variety of assessment data has been increasing over the past decades and their appeal to researchers and practitioners alike continues to grow These models have been used in English language assessment international large scale assessments and for feedback for practice exams in preparation of college admission testing just to name a few Nowadays technology based assessments provide increasingly rich data on a multitude of skills and allow collection of data with respect to multiple types of behaviors Diagnostic models can be understood as an ideal match for these types of data collections to provide more in depth information about test taker skills and behavioral tendencies
