

WHAT IS A THESIS STATEMENT?

Do you continue to receive comments from your professors about your inadequate thesis statements? Maybe you are not sure what they are looking for, or what a thesis is, exactly. Perhaps your thesis statements usually look something like this:

"This paper will discuss the biblical mandate of baptism." (Just a topic.)

"This author seeks to develop a rebuttal to the problem of evil." (Just a promise.)

"In this essay, I will discuss how Shakespeare develops the theme of love." (Just a topic.)

The bad news is, your professors are right: none of the above could pass as a thesis statement. At times in one's academic career, it can feel like a thesis statement is some elusive code or perfect string of words that one manages to jumble together on occasion. The good news is that the concept of the thesis statement is actually quite concrete and definite (not magical hidden knowledge), and once a writer grasps the concept, he or she can become confident at recognizing and writing thesis statements, also called main claims.

You may have read the definition of a thesis before, but here it is again:

What is a thesis? A thesis is a sentence that asserts an answer to a research question, a solution to a problem, or a position statement. A paper without a clear thesis is not an argument, but merely a theme or topic, while an "argument" is thesis-driven.

Let's create an example where a writer is given an assignment to write a paper on the topic of "Health and Fast Food." The writer then narrows the topic to "McDonalds" and begins researching about McDonalds. The writer begins to write down some research in a rough draft, but without having a question to answer, he has no way to know what information to include or exclude—does he give an entire history of the restaurant? Does he focus on hiring and management? Include facts about food production, calories, and nutrition value? Staff salaries? Workplace violence? Sanitation procedures?
