

INT. A BEDROOM

JOYCE, a middle-aged woman, is standing in front of her full length mirror, rearranging her necklace as she gets ready in the morning. She is wearing a nightgown and her hair is wet.

JOYCE

(Looks at necklace)

How do I keep the specimen, the Joyce specimen, forty-five, in her natural habitat. Note the coyness today and the lack of support for back, breasts, and neck. Hard to believe this beauty was suspected in the 1950-murder death in the 1958 Olympics.

(Looks a little spook)

If I could draw your eye to the leg area, you will note that the calves still look phenomenon and are supported by the cellulite surrounding on the thighs. Ah yes, but what we're all getting ourselves in for does she do it?

(Spoke up as specimen passed and begins to dab her eyes)

Well, folks, we start with what Joyce's mother called "limpata eyes." Not a limp eye either at the night museum, as everyone knows, Joyce's mother was married from time to time and, as you can't tell from looking at the face, the look was noticed by everyone. It's unbelievable would have believed that once said she'd never be anything but her mother, but the whole process was...

From Aphra Behn to Fun Home Carey Purcell, 2019-12-04 Theatre has long been considered a feminine interest for which women consistently purchase the majority of tickets while the shows they are seeing typically are written and brought to the stage by men. Furthermore, the stories these productions tell are often about men and the complex leading roles in these shows are written for and performed by male actors. Despite this imbalance, the feminist voice presses to be heard and has done so with more success than ever before. In From Aphra Behn to Fun Home: A Cultural History of Feminist Theatre, Carey Purcell traces the evolution of these important artists and productions over several centuries. After examining the roots of feminist theatre in early Greek plays and looking at occasional works produced before the twentieth century, Purcell then identifies the key players and productions that have emerged over the last several decades. This book covers the heyday of the second wave feminist movement, which saw the growth of female-centric theatre groups and highlights the work of playwrights such as Caryl Churchill, Pam Gems, and Wendy Wasserstein. Other prominent artists discussed here include playwrights Paula Vogel, Lynn, and Tony award-winning directors Garry Hynes and Julie Taymor. The volume also examines diversity in contemporary feminist theatre with discussions of such playwrights as Young Jean Lee and Lynn Nottage and a look toward the future. Purcell explores the very nature of feminist theater: does it qualify if a play is written by a woman, or does it just need to feature strong female characters, as well as how notable activist work for feminism has played a pivotal role in theatre. An engaging survey of female artists on stage and behind the scenes, From Aphra Behn to Fun Home will be of interest to theatregoers and anyone interested in the invaluable contributions of women in the performing arts.
