Nature Wars Jim Sterba,2013-11-12 For four hundred years explorers traders and settlers plundered North American wildlife in an escalating rampage but in the twentieth century an incredible turnaround took place Conservationists created wildlife sanctuaries restored habitats and imposed regulations on hunters and trappers Over decades they nursed many wild populations back to health Then after World War II something happened that conservationists hadn t foreseen sprawl People moved into suburbs and then kept moving outward All the while well meaning efforts to protect animals allowed wild populations to burgeon out of control causing damage costing billions degrading ecosystems and touching off disputes that polarized communities The result is a mix of people and wildlife that should be an animal lover s dream but often turns into a sprawl dweller s nightmare Deeply researched eloquently written and perceptively humorous Nature Wars expresses the need for organic reconnection with our natural ecosystem by offering a provocative look at how Americans created an

Vicious Jon T. Coleman, 2008-10-01 Over a continent and three centuries American livestock owners destroyed wolves to protect the beasts that supplied them with food clothing mobility and wealth The brutality of the campaign soon exceeded wolves misdeeds Wolves menaced property not people but storytellers often depicted the animals as ravenous threats to human safety Subjects of nightmares and legends wolves fell prey not only to Americans thirst for land and resources but also to their deeper anxieties about the untamed frontier Now Americans study and protect wolves and jail hunters who shoot them without authorization Wolves have become the poster beasts of the great American wilderness and the federal government has paid millions of dollars to reintroduce them to scenic habitats like Yellowstone National Park Why did Americans hate wolves for centuries And given the ferocity of this loathing why are Americans now so protective of the animals In this ambitious history of wolves in America and of the humans who have hated and then loved them Jon Coleman investigates a fraught relationship between two species and uncovers striking similarities deadly differences and all too frequently tragic misunderstanding What the Robin Knows Jon Young, 2012 How understanding bird language and behavior can help us to see more wildlife

Ways of Nature John Burroughs, 1905 Trash Animals Kelsi Nagy, Phillip David Johnson II, 2013-04-01 Why are some species admired or beloved while others are despised An eagle or hawk circling overhead inspires awe while urban pigeons shuffling underfoot are kicked away in revulsion Fly fishermen consider carp an unwelcome trash fish even though the trout they hope to catch are often equally non native Wolves and coyotes are feared and hunted in numbers wildly disproportionate to the dangers they pose to humans and livestock In Trash Animals a diverse group of environmental writers explores the natural history of wildlife species deemed filthy unwanted invasive or worthless highlighting the vexed relationship humans have with such creatures Each essay focuses on a so called trash species gulls coyotes carp cockroaches magpies prairie dogs and lubber grasshoppers among others examining the biology and behavior of each in contrast to the assumptions widely held about them Identifying such animals as trash tells us nothing about problematic wildlife but rather reveals more about human expectations of and frustrations with the natural world By establishing the unique place that maligned species occupy in the contemporary landscape and in our imagination the contributors challenge us to look closely at these animals to reimagine our ethics of engagement with such wildlife and to question the violence with which we treat them Perhaps our attitudes reveal more about humans than they do about the animals Contributors Bruce Barcott Charles Bergman Pacific Lutheran U James E Bishop Young Harris College Andrew D Blechman Michael P Branch U of Nevada Reno Lisa Couturier Carolyn Kraus U of Michigan Dearborn Jeffrey A Lockwood U
