Chapter 1 Introduction

1.1 Multiple-Choice Questions

1) A Java program is best classified as

- A) hardware
- B) software
- C) storage
- D) processor
- E) input

Answer: B

Explanation: B) Programs are classified as software to differentiate them from the mechanisms of the computer (hardware). Storage and the processor are two forms of hardware while input is the information that the program processes.

2) 6 bits can be used to represent _____ distinct items or values

- A) 6
- B) 20
- C) 24
- D) 32
- E) 64

Answer: E

Explanation: E) With n bits, we can represent 2^n different values. $2^6 = 64$.

3) When executing a program, the processor reads each program instruction from

- A) secondary memory (storage)
- B) the Internet
- C) registers stored in the processor
- D) main memory
- E) could be any of these

Answer: D

Explanation: D) The program is first loaded from secondary memory into main memory before it is executed so that the processor is not slowed down by reading each instruction. This idea of executing programs stored in memory is called the Stored Program Computer and was pioneered by John Von Neumann in the 1940s.

Data Structures and Algorithms in Java Michael T. Goodrich, Roberto Tamassia, Michael H. Goldwasser, 2014-01-28 The design and analysis of efficient data structures has long been recognized as a key component of the Computer Science curriculum. Goodrich, Tamassia and Goldwasser's approach to this classic topic is based on the object oriented paradigm as the framework of choice for the design of data structures. For each ADT presented in the text, the authors provide an associated Java interface. Concrete data structures realizing the ADTs are provided as Java classes implementing the interfaces. The Java code implementing fundamental data structures in this book is organized in a single Java package, `net.datastructures`. This package forms a coherent library of data structures and algorithms in Java specifically designed for educational purposes in a way that is complimentary with the Java Collections Framework.
